KEY JOB FOR LAIRD

Nixon Shuffles Staff

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon announced three moves today in a major rebuilding of his Watergate-shaken White House staff.

Gen. Alexander Haig is to retire from army duty and continue as chief of the White House staff, a post he has held on an interim basis.

Former defence secretary Melvin Laird is appointed counsellor to the president for domestic affairs and, in that cabinet-rank post, will in effect succeed John Ehrlichman who resigned April 30 along with the former staff chief H. R. Haldeman.

Ronald Ziegler, while remaining as press secretary, will be given the added title of assistant to the president and given a role in White House policy making.

Today's announcement said Haig will be responsible for "co-ordination and supervision of the day-to-day operations and responsibilities of the White House staff."

Laird, a former U.S. House of Representatives member from Wisconsin, "will be responsible for the over-all formulation and co-ordination of domestic policy," said the White House.

Ziegler, with the resignation of Herbert Klein as director of communications, will assume responsibility for the communications office as well as the press office. It said:

"As assistant to the president, he will be involved in policy meetings both with the president and other senior staff members, and also will retain his briefing responsibilities and daily contact with members of the press."

In other developments:

● Ehrlichman has claimed that former U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell gave his specific approval to plans to bug the Democrats' Watergate headquarters.

In a deposition released Tuesday, Ehrlichman quoted deputy presidential campaign manager Jeb Stuart Magruder as saying that Mitchell gave oral approval of the bugging operation.

● Sam Dash, Senate Watergate committee counsel said today he will seek through negotiations, rather than subpoena, to obtain logs of conversations between Nixon and John Dean, ousted

$800 CITY HOLDUP

A middle-aged man staged a robbery this morning at the Yates-Government branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

He was believed to have escaped with about $800 in large bills after passing one of the tellers a note which said he was armed.

Other employees in the bank were apparently unaware of what was happening.

The robbery occurred at 11:30 a.m. The robber left the bank and ran east on Yates.

It is the second robbery in less than two years at the same bank.

The bank staff watched in horror as Berkhardt Bateman, 19, gunned down two city policemen at point blank range in September, 1971. Both policemen recovered.

Dollar Crisis Talks

PARIS—Top United States and European monetary officials met here today amid growing speculation of imminent new measures by the Nixon administration to restore confidence in the United States dollar.

In parallel developments, President Nixon has been holding a series of high-level policy talks with his key economic advisers in Washington.

Despite the U.S. devaluation last February and the floating of major currencies the following month, the dollar has declined steeply in recent days, and the price of gold has risen to all-time records.

In London today, however, the price of gold dropped and the dollar improved at the start of trading on Europe's seesaw money markets, where gold over the past several weeks has skyrocketed and the dollar has crumbled.

Dealers attributed today's developments to profit taking by speculators who drove the price of dollars to new lows in hectic trading Tuesday.

Most money experts before today's trading began agreed that the scramble to buy gold and sell dollars showed no sign of ending.

French President Georges Pompidou Tuesday night told a group of international bankers that "we are witnessing the third devaluation of the (U.S.) dollar."

The fact that Shultz has made a quick change in plans —he will make his appearance here today and then head back immediately to the United States—has added to the note of uneasiness.

Tuesday night, Nixon assembled his closest economic aides in Washington for policy discussions on the U.S. economy.

Republican Senate Leader Hugh Scott said after the meeting the president was actively considering domestic economic measures to counter inflation.

Gold in London dropped back $6.50 an ounce to $120.50 at the close of trading.

Firemen Give Notice

Residents of North Saanich will be without fire protection as of 10 p.m. Thursday unless internal problems in the volunteer fire department are resolved, fire chief Wally Snow said today.

The ultimatum—solve the problems or else—was issued to municipal council after a fire department meeting Tuesday night. The men have given council 48 hours to set things straight.

Snow said 11 members of the 21-member department have already resigned over the dispute with council, but said fire protection would continue until the 48 hours had run out.

"The public can rest assured that they will get fire protection until Thursday night, but unless something happens at that time, that will be the end of it."

Snow said a meeting with council will be held before the 48-hour deadline, but just exactly when, he wasn't sure.

The dispute, he said, revolves mainly around a matter of administration.

Deputy fire chief Ron Evans was more specific about the problems in the department:

"The main thing in this fight is communication and co-operation between our fire department and the council. There are many things underneath that, but communications and co-operation are the basic issues—many of these things we're not prepared to bring to the public, at least not at this time."

Both Snow and Evans said a statement would be issued to residents of North Saanich telling them the outcome of the meeting.

As of this morning, North Saanich aldermen knew nothing of the meeting, or of the dispute.

Crash Strait No-Man Sea

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The most dangerous area of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, where the second collision between two freighters within a month occurred Tuesday is a No-Man's Land.

Neither the Canadian nor the U.S. coast guard system of traffic monitoring extends that far.

Officials agreed, however, because of the prevalence of fog banks in the area, it was probably the place where marine traffic is most vulnerable to incidents such as Tuesday's.

Two large freighters — the 544-foot container vessel Oriental Mariner and the 564-foot log carrier Way Way — rammed into each other Tuesday about 12:30 p.m. in American waters just north of Noah Bay on the Washington side of the Strait.

The spot was barely five-miles away from where the Indian vessel Vishva Shakti and the Australian freighter Allunga collided May 16.

A U.S. coast guard spokesman in Seattle admitted today that monitoring on their side of the coast only covered the area from Puget Sound up to Port Angeles.

A spokesman of the ministry of transport's Vancouver office confirmed that the Canadian system, too, had a "blind spot" in the most crucial stretch of the Strait.

The Canadian system only reaches as far as Sheringham Point.

Both countries' systems are based on voluntary reporting of ships as the first phase of programs that eventually will have all traffic being tracked by radar from shore bases. Ships will also be required to report their positions to various check points once they reach Cape Flattery and head into the mouth of the Strait.

The Oriental Mariner was limping at a slow four knots toward Seattle today for repairs, her bow badly battered, both anchors torn away and her No. 1 hold damaged.

The coast guard official said she is due to arrive in Seattle about 9:30 tonight.

Because of her extensive damage to the bow two tugs tried to tow her by the stern Tuesday. A third larger tug was despatched in the night hours.

Machinists Hit 5 Cities

Times News Services

In the third of a series of spot strikes, Air Canada machinists walked off the job in Halifax, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon and Thunder Bay, Ont., today.

A union spokesman said a walkout would take place at another — as-yet undisclosed — location Thursday.

Speculation is that Thursday's walkout could be centered on Toronto, the only major centre in Canada not hit so far in the dispute between the union and the country's national airline.

The only centre which reported flights cancelled today was Winnipeg.

An Air Canada spokesman acknowledged a union charge that the airline had kept 150 supervisory personnel at the Skyline Hotel in Toronto in anticipation of a strike in that city, but said the number of people "on stand-by" was closer to 50.

TWO MAYORS WALK OUT

Times News Services

CHARLOTTETOWN — The mayors of Canada's second and third largest cities walked out of the annual meeting of the Federation of Mayors and Municipalities conference Tuesday.

Toronto's David Crombie and Vancouver's Art Phillips both said the conference was irrelevant to the needs of municipalities.

Crombie, who swept into office last December at the head of a reform slate, rapped the meeting as purley a "social occasion."

Phillips said he felt he was "just wasting my time" at the meeting.

"There are things to do" at home, he added.

At the core of the dispute between the large cities and the smaller municipalities is a debate over the way to conduct talks with senior governments.

The smaller communities — which hold the balance of power at the meeting — favor a concerted approach to provincial and federal officials. The larger cities want each community to bargain on its own with senior governments.

2,000 FLEE COMMUNISTS

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — More than 2,000 residents of Ang Snoul, 15 miles southeast of here, fled from their homes today in the direction of the capital after Communist troops swept into the town following 24 hours of heavy fighting.

Military intelligence sources said they believed the attacks on Ang Snoul and the nearby town of Kompong Tram were designed to coincide with the opening of the second round of Paris peace talks.

Air Canada, CN Record Years

OTTAWA — Canada's two Crown Corporation transportation firms showed strong financial gains in 1972, according to annual reports tabled Tuesday in the Commons.

Air Canada earned a record net income of $8.6 million and Canadian National also had a record year with an operating profit of $48.3 million.

However, payments on a long-term CN debt produced a deficit of $17.8 million.

U.S. Fuel Clamps Sought

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The Senate has overwhelmingly voted to direct President Nixon to clamp strict controls on the oil industry's allocation of fuel to help ease the gasoline shortage.

By a vote of 85 to 10 Tuesday, the senate approved a bill that would require the president to establish mandatory government fuel allocation regulations and impose them whenever he determines that any energy source is in short supply.

Sen. Henry Jackson, chairman of the interior committee, said the lopsided vote showed there was a "new mood of urgency" in Congress over the energy crisis.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association Tuesday said a check of more than 1,500 gas stations around the U.S. showed two-thirds of them had adequate supplies.

The survey showed the southeast and northwest sections appeared to have the tightest gasoline supplies at present.

Blazing Gun Escape

COMPIEGNE, France (AP) —Jacques Mesrine, wanted in Canada for several murders and robberies, made a spectacular gun-wielding escape today from a courthouse in this town north of Paris. In the process he used a judge as a shield and shot a guard.

It was the second time he slipped through the hands of the law. He escaped from a maximum security jail in Quebec last year after cutting through two wire fences.

Mesrine was brought here to appear in a cheque-fraud case. Handcuffed, he asked to go to the lavatory.

Later in court when the judge walked in Mesrine pulled out a gun and threatened to kill him unless he were set free. The guards immediately unlocked the handcuffs.

Shielded by the judge, Mesrine walked slowly past the dumbfounded spectators, slipped into a getaway car and drove away.

He was intercepted by a police van nearby but shot a guard through the shoulder and disappeared.

Record Vancouver Drug Bust

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record 173 suspected drug traffickers were charged here Tuesday following a massive undercover operation by two Vancouver police constables and a seven-man surveillance team in the last five months.

The roundup began as police and RCMP officers arrested at least 53 persons charged mainly with possession and trafficking of heroin. Of the 173 warrants issued, 122 deal with heroin distribution.

The two undercover officers were recent graduates of the police academy when the investigation began Feb. 5. During their work they made 80 buys on Vancouver streets, 32 involving heroin.

The surveillance team then followed suspects for names and addresses, resulting in 90 persons being charged with 205 offences.

Staff Sgt. Sid Devries said most of the persons charged are small-time street dealers. However, two of those sought are considered very big, dealing in ounces of heroin. Asked if the roundup would put a dent in Vancouver's heroin system, he replied, "It will if they keep them in jail."

Those arrested Tuesday were held without bail and were scheduled to appear in court today.

A spokesman for the RCMP drug squad in the Victoria area said today the Vancouver undercover operation did not lead to any arrests there.

"We weren't involved in any way." The charges were "totally independent of our operation," RCMP superintendent Jim Nelson said.

The previous drug roundup record was in October, 1972, when 123 Vancouver-area people were charged in a nationwide investigation by RCMP. The Vancouver total was more than half that of the rest of Canada.

Area Charities 'Taken for Ride'

Professional promoters from outside are taking some local charities for a ride, Saanich finance committee was told Tuesday night.

Garth Homer, executive director of the community council, made the statement in connection with an inter-municipal committee proposal to regulate public appeals.

Saanich tabled the matter until more details have been given.

Co-ordination, prevention of overlapping campaigns, protection to donors, assuring legitimacy of purpose and an accounting of money donated in general appeals seeking a minimum $1,000 would be the task of a charitable appeals review board, committee was told.

Without naming participants, Homer cited a recent case in which a promoter came in, set up eight or nine telephones, hired some youths and campaigned for a month, taking 85 per cent of the donations for his services and leaving only 15 per cent for the charity.

It was "strictly a con job this sort of thing is moving across the country," Homer said.

Homer said he felt so strongly about the need for such a board that he was prepared to recommend to the Community Council that it absorb the cost of service.

But he said it was impossible to assess the projected cost of the review service at this point. He felt existing staff could handle the work arising on a "spotty" basis, doubting there would be more than 12 or 15 appeals a year to deal with.

There was no information on how many actual appeals there are in Greater Victoria, he said.

Aldermen were concerned whether the board would check out local church, sports and school fund drives. Homer said it would not handle situations where value is given, as in car washes and cookie sales.

Many sports campaigns are already covered by legislation such as the lotteries law.

"Here we go again — another board," commented Ald. Alan Newberry. "Has there really been a problem with charities in Victoria . . . a need to go to a board and make charity such a sophisticated, slick thing."

The move suggests paternalism, he felt.

The committee wanted more specific definition of scope and projected costs before going further.

Homer referred to stringent regulations of charities in Vancouver, where a bylaw is in effect. It requires a municipal licence, formal approval of professionally-conducted campaigns and exempts such appeals as church and organizational drives among memberships.

Vancouver also provides for up to a $500 fine and two months in jail for conviction of violators.

White House counsel. Dash, the committee counsel, said that if the White House material is relevant evidence "we certainly will be seeking it." He denied saying Tuesday a subpoena would be issued soon.

● Maurice Stans, the most successful political fund-raiser in history, is refusing to testify before the Watergate committee unless an indictment which could send him to jail for 40 years is dismissed first. It appears certain the senate panel would reject his offer and refuse to ask federal Judge Lee Gagliardi in New York to dismiss the indictment against him. Stans is charged with lying to the New York grand jury which indicted financier Robert Vesco and interfering with the Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of Vesco.

In his evidence Ehrlichman also quoted Dean as saying that Mitchell approved the plans in writing and selected the Watergate and two additional sites to be placed under electronic surveillance.

Although portions of the Ehrlichman deposition appear certain to be disputed by some of the persons mentioned in it, the document offers a fascinating look into elements of the decision-making process and atmosphere that led to the Watergate bugging and the subsequent attempt to cover it up.

The sworn statement is the strongest evidence made public to date showing that the former attorney-general was deeply involved in the Watergate operation.

In addition, Ehrlichman said, Magruder stated that Mitchell "was given the results of the surveillance. I don't know whether it was logs or in what form, but he was aware of the unsatisfactory results."

The "unsatisfactory results" stemmed from the mechanical failure of a tap on the telephone of then-Democratic Party chairman Lawrence O'Brien in May, 1972.

This infuriated Mitchell, according to what Ehrlichman said he was told by Magruder.

Most Diphtheria Patients on Mend

The number of people in Greater Victoria treated for diphtheria in the current outbreak creeps higher but most patients are already recovered and home from hospital.

The latest suspected case, an eight-year-old girl, was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital over the weekend, bringing to 29 the number of actual and suspected cases as well as carriers treated in Victoria's two general hospitals over about six weeks.

Jubilee has had 16 patients who were clinically ill and three healthy carriers, with the latest suspected case making a total of 20. But there are only four cases currently in hospital.

Victoria General Hospital has treated and discharged five cases and currently has four suspected cases admitted.

Diphtheria can be effectively treated with modern drugs. But all cases, suspected or confirmed as well as carriers, have been hospitalized in isolation to restrict it spreading.

People who have been immunized can carry the infection without showing symptoms and spread it.

Thunderbird Park Major Revamp Set

A major replanning of the layout of Thunderbird Park, adjacent to the Provincial Museum, took a step forward Tuesday when the city and the provincial government's public works department reached tentative agreement on a land trade-off.

The deal will see the city agreeing to the closure of Elliott Street, the small lane that leads nowhere off lower Douglas, in return for acquiring a narrow strip of Thunderbird Park adjacent to the sidewalk for road widening.

For the province, the Elliott closure will be the key to implementing long-mooted plans for a "new look" park area and pedestrian oasis.

For Victoria's traffic department, the land acquisition will enable provision of an extra lane southbound on the short uphill stretch of Douglas between the Belleville intersection and the Glenshiel Hotel.

The city traffic committee recommended Tuesday that city traffic engineer Dave Campbell be authorized to enter negotiations with the provincial public works department and obtain cost estimates.

Campbell told aldermen the extra traffic capacity will be especially vital if proposals for a Government Street mall are to be at all realistic.

Elliott at one time used to link Government and Douglas. The remaining portion in front of Helmcken House is now "just a dusty lane where people dump their cars when they go to Vancouver for the weekend," a provincial government spokesman said today.

The spokesman declined to reveal what the plans are for the new Thunderbird Park layout, saying these still have to receive approval at a senior level.

He did say, however, that the park will become a "more viable, gracious and useful adjunct to the city."

was not enough to get her moving.

The Oriental Mariner's master managed to get steam up in his vessel at 6:30 a.m. today, sufficient to move his crippled vessel at minimum speed.

The Way Way has made her own way into Seattle for repairs at the Todd shipyard.

She has a jagged hole, about 50 feet across in the mid-section of her port side, where the Oriental Mariner ploughed into her.

Both ships report that none of their crews were injured in the collision.

While both the coast guard official and the ministry of transport spokesman agreed that extension of monitoring services should be extended neither were hopeful that the blind spot in the system would be remedied in the near future.

Both agreed that international cost-sharing agreements between the U.S. and Canada could delay the implementation of the needed system.

They also conceded the increased oil tanker traffic to Cherry Point on the Washington coast was adding to the hazards.

"Eventually we hope to extend our system up as far as Barkley Sound," the transport spokesman reported, "it's going to be expensive but it has to be done."

If Ottawa and Washington agree to split costs of the traffic system what kind of a bill are we looking at?

"It depends on the split we get with the Americans," the transport official said, "For the cost of hardware — such as radar — we're probably looking at $2 million. Added to that, of course, there'll be site development of the shore bases."

"When we consider we spent about $1 million on the oil clean-ups of the Vanlene and the Irish Stardust," he added, "this will be money well spent. It won't prevent 100 per cent of the accidents but it will enhance the safety of the area very much."

Canada's voluntary reporting system by ships was to become mandatory by July.

The official said this would probably not be able to be implemented until the fall because of the elevator strike preventing equipment to be installed in shore check points.

The coast guard spokesman said too, that their system had "no firm date" for advancing into the mandatory stage of reporting.

STUDENT THREW PIE AT PRINCIPAL

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A provincial court judge Tuesday fined a local high school student $100 for throwing a pie in his principal's face.

Stanley Ferguson, 17, was charged with common assault against Ricciotti Marcuzzi, after the incident at the school. The youth said other students had dared him.

"You were led around by the nose," Judge T. L. Steele told Ferguson, who pleaded guilty.

"I am going to fine you $100 or 14 days and put you on probation for six months," the judge said. "The only term of the probation will be that you will write a letter of apology to the principal, and you will bring it to me to read first, by June 30."

Cold Reaction To Mall Plan

Said Ald. Mike Young: "I don't think this proposal can be rescued. It has to be crushed and reconsidered."

Furthermore, Young said, city council's Advisory Design Panel had been "fairly sweeping" in its condemnation of the plans, deploring particularly the fact that three levels were proposed for a relatively narrow, confined space.

Other aldermen disliked the "well" feature of the design, showing a small plaza below ground level, and Ald. Alf Hood said the whole concept of "interlinking ramps and patios" was wrong for the site.

He said the alley area between the two streets, formerly known as Mac's parking lot, had been bought by the city with the sole aim of turning it into an attractive, simple "mini-mall" featuring some paving, shrubs, grass and benches. The model was a cluttered far cry from that idea, he added.

In the works for more than three years, the courtyard-mall proposal is seen as the third stage of the ambitious beautification and improvement project involving merchants of the 700-block Yates.

It is to be carried out under a local improvement scheme, with the major part of the cost borne by merchants whose property abuts the complex. The city will make the cash outlay of the merchants' share but recover the money by levying a special mill rate over a 20-year period.

Aldermen agreed Tuesday the firm of Willis, Cunliffe, Tait and Co. should be informed that the present design for the mall is totally unacceptable.

With Mayor Peter Pollen attending a municipal convention in Charlottetown, P.E.I., it was the first Tuesday afternoon "shirt-sleeve" session of council opened to reporters in several months.

Envoy To Probe Shootings

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has sent a special envoy to Zambia to seek more information about the shooting deaths of two 19-year-old Ontario girls, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday.

He also told the Commons that Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda apologized in a letter for the shootings, which occurred May 15 at Victoria Falls on the Zambia-Rhodesia border.

However, the East African leader did not offer to compensate the families of Christine Sinclair of Guelph, Ont., and Marjan Drijber of Rockwood, Sharp told Ontario Conservative Alfred Hales.

"The government has taken the extraordinary step of sending an envoy to Zambia to underline the concern of the Canadian people to President Kaunda," he said.

Outside the Commons, Sharp said he fears the controversy over the deaths of the Canadian tourists may result in a withdrawal of public support for Canadian aid to Zambia.

Explaining his reason for sending the envoy, he said: "I didn't think the Zambian government and President Kaunda understood the depth of concern that exists in Canada over this issue."

He said an apology without compensation is "a small comfort to the girls' parents" and said he would welcome any offer of compensation from Zambia.

Skylab Repairmen Stage Practice Run for Thursday

HOUSTON (AP)— The Skylab repair crew practised tricky manoeuvres today for a two-man space walk Thursday to attempt to pry or cut free a jammed solar panel.

The astronauts stop work on most experiments today and hold a four-hour rehearsal for the difficult task that could nearly double the electricity in their power-shy space station.

In the large workshop area of the orbiting laboratory, they were to assemble and work with a battery of tools and tethers needed for the salvage job.

Today was their 13th day in space.

Commander Charles Conrad and Dr. Joseph Kerwin are to open an airlock hatch at 8:37 a.m. PDT Thursday. Half an hour later, Conrad is to scramble some 25 feet across the side of the barrel-shaped vehicle to the stuck panel.

Conrad will try to cut through or pry loose a once-inch wide aluminum strip that is holding the one-ton panel against the side of the station.

The third crew member, Paul Weitz, will remain inside the workshop, relaying instructions from Mission Control.

Once Conrad frees the panel, he'll have to provide the muscle to snap it into place.

If the wing swings properly into place, three large sections of solar cells will unfold to catch the sun's rays and convert them to electricity. They would add 3,000 watts to Skylab's power supply.

This would enable the astronauts to complete a full experiment schedule during the remainder of their 28-day flight. It also would increase the chances for success of the Skylab 2 and 3 crews who are to visit the station later in the year.

There was a minor flap Tuesday over Conrad's physical condition when Mission Control doctors revealed he had experienced irregular heart beats earlier in the mission.

But Conrad rode the bicycle exerciser again Tuesday after doctors said there was no repeat of the irregular heart condition.

A TESTIMONIAL ABOUT A CAR, FROM A MAN WHOSE LIFE DEPENDS ON A CAR.

"In my work, if you want to stay alive, you leave nothing to chance.

"Obviously the car is everything. Before I drive a car I know it 100%. The body and suspension must be extraordinarily strong.

"And mechanically it must perform with great precision. It must do exactly what I want, exactly when I want it.

"Because if I am even one hundredth of a second off, it is goodbye."

Now, since in Europe there are 50 different kinds of cars to choose from, we thought you'd be interested to know that in the more than 100 films Rémy Julienne has made he's done more stunts in Fiats than in any other car.

A Slight Farewell

In announcing an end to his years of active participation in provincial politics, spanning 32 years in the British Columbia Legislature and two decades as premier, Mr. Bennett appears to have rung down the curtain on one of the most outstanding careers in the history of the province.

It is difficult to accept that fact — and it may not be quite necessary to do so. For the former Social Credit leader promises that he will retain an involvement in politics from outside the House and maintain his "great crusade" against the NDP government. In announcing that it is age, not lack of health, that has led to his retirement, Mr. Bennett leaves a suspicion that he is not really through yet. Among the unfinished business may be a wish to see his son, William, take over the South Okanagan seat which he now relinquishes, and perhaps some day the rest of the Bennett offices.

Mr. Bennett's career is popularly spoken of as an unbroken 32 years in the Legislature. Actually, there was a gap in his long service as an MLA, when in 1948 he dropped out of the Legislature to run as a Progressive Conservative in the federal by-election in Yale, caused by the ill health of the Hon. Grote Stirling, Progressive Conservative. It is interesting that Mr. Bennett on that occasion was defeated by Owen L. Jones, a furniture merchant of Kelowna and Penticton—Mr. Bennett's own stamping ground.

Mr. Jones ran on the CCF ticket, and won with nearly 13,000 votes to Mr. Bennett's nearly 8,000. A Liberal candidate by the name of Chambers was on Mr. Bennett's heels with 7,500 votes. But this was only a temporary detour off the main journey. A by-election quickly restored Mr. Bennett to the Legislature, and his election victories remained unbroken until the recent NDP sweep.

Now the curtain closes on Cecil Bennett, MLA. But it would be a brash observer who would bet that there won't be an encore—perhaps as straight man for a Bennett and Bennett appearance?

"... there's a group of Grade Four students here . . . they have a few questions for you about corporations and how they relate to our community . . ."

Leaving the Sea Lanes

The trend away from ocean liner passenger service using North American ports became clear following World War II when the CPR decided not to reinstate its great white ships on the runs from Victoria and Vancouver to the Orient. Now the result is more fully confirmed by an analysis of American shipping on the North Atlantic. The once-famed vessel, the United States, provides the example—and the explanation.

Built at a cost of $79 million in 1952, a figure that included a heavy government subsidy, the ship required further subsidies for operation—$118 million between 1955 and 1969—and was bought in by the United States Maritime Administration shortly after the latter year for $4.5 million.

The entire American passenger service fleet has been kept at sea through operating subsidies, and indications are that the American flag, being hauled down on vessel after vessel, will not fly again on international passenger routes.

Costs have been the killer—coupled with the surging growth of the aircraft passenger service. Union troubles have contributed to the demise of the big ships as the result of disruptions due to wage and working condition disputes, with their resulting cancellations of scheduled sailings.

Even for the wealthy United States, the expense has been too great. That is an issue which Canadians may note as calls rise periodically for restoration of the fleets which once plied the world's oceans carrying the Canadian flag.

Biter Bitten?

The one-day closing of Rayonier Canada Ltd.'s Port Alice pulp operation shows that the provincial government has muscle when it comes to enforcing pollution control laws. But the enforcement axe is double-bitted.

At Port Alice 410 workers lost a day's pay. And Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) says the government will be just as tough on itself when it takes over the recently acquired Columbia Cellulose operation near Prince Rupert June 29.

There is a touch of irony in that. One of the NDP's stated aims in taking over the Prince Rupert Col-Cel plant was to ensure employment in the area despite the marginal profitability of the operation. If the government mill is forced to close down to conform to government pollution standards the NDP will feel the turning of the screw.

Such are the anomalies government must live with when it goes into business.

A Downhill Road to March 1

News that some British Columbia car insurance agents are charging as much as a $10 "fee for service" on top of the 10 per cent commission they already receive on a car insurance policy is disturbing. The provincial insurance industry put up a strong fight to keep auto insurance out of government hands. They lost the fight when the people of this province elected the New Democratic Party to power in August.

Auto insurance agents are understandably frustrated — they see their incomes from commissions shrinking by one-twelfth each month as the March takeover date approaches. But these frustrations should not be dumped on the public, although less-than-12-month policies presumably could command a higher premium rate.

The Insurance Agents' Association of B.C. has asked the provincial government for a hearing on fees. This should be held soon, for it is clear that the last few months of privately handled automobile insurance may degenerate into a scramble to find agents who will cover drivers for the terminal period. Certainly any "gouging" —the term used by Association president Jack Hamilton—should be halted.

Strategy—Whatever That Is

OTTAWA — The political parties are impulse buyers, afire with competitive zeal to snap up any concept with an attractive appearance of novelty. Only afterwards do they inquire into its meaning, if any.

Over the week-end the Conservatives devoted a caucus to economic policy, dividing their time between serious discussions and the pursuit of various will-o'-the-wisps, such as regional interest rates. They also came out strongly for a "national industrial strategy," which apparently means to them more intensive efforts to process raw materials in this country.

On Monday Jean-Pierre Goyer devoted an entire speech in Halifax to a national industrial strategy and the relation to it of his department of supply and services. Mr. Goyer made it sound even more impressive by inserting at appropriate points in his text additional adjectives, such as "overall" and "dynamic."

Some Ministers latterly have been rather cautious on this subject. Thus, John Turner has pointed out that an industrial strategy is not exactly new; we have had one, inadequate as it may have been, since the days of John A. Macdonald. For his part, Alastair Gillespie has made careful use of the plural; his emphasis on "strategies" implies a recognition that we are not likely to develop one sweeping, soul-satisfying, all-encompassing, dynamic plan.

Mr. Goyer has passed beyond these nagging uncertainties. Speaking of our limited resources and the need of priorities, he told the Purchasing Managament Association: "There is no doubt that in Canada, a modern industrialized nation, the efficient production of goods and services must be one of our first priorities. Can we today question the necessity for an industrial strategy in this country?"

Perhaps. There is a first and basic question. Do these gentlemen know what they are talking about or are they dealing in meaningless jargon? Among other questions that follow is: Are they all talking about the same thing?

Peer Into Future

According to Mr. Goyer, we must look beyond the present day, peer into the future, to develop this industrial strategy. "We must identify the new forces that will influence the industrial world, assess the impact of technological change and determine what human, scientific and financial resources will be available."

To the extent possible politicians certainly should think of the future. But Mr. Goyer's prescription seems rather formidable. How are we to identify with confidence forces yet to emerge when we do not understand those now influencing the present industrial world? The general inflation is one example. Another is the disordered international monetary system, which has not lacked the attention of the most eminent experts in one crisis meeting after another. Industry is also affected by politics, and how are we to plot the future political behavior of other countries when our own behaviour at the polls is constantly driving our leaders to near distraction?

There has been much talk of mapping technological change. The practice, has at times been disappointing. Theoretically, after all these years, we should now be drawing enormous production from the Athabasca oil sands. If Mr. Goyer looks into the matter, however, he will find that there have been recurring practical, technological problems such as sand in the gears.

"It is no longer possible," continues the Minister, "for industry to work in isolation. Nor is it possible for government to develop programs to assist industry without first developing an overall strategy — a strategy that will define major goals and working methods for the benefit of the whole community."

Now this is remarkable. For government never stops developing programs in aid of industry; it is currently spending huge sums on them; and yet the so-called industrial strategy is something which, by the testimony of all the political parties, we have yet to develop.

While Mr. Goyer insists that he is not for intervention in the internal workings of the private sector, it is the responsibility of government, he notes, to maintain a favorable climate for development "by providing industry with enlightened information on national and international trends." Yet, even on the short term, there are difficulties. If national — let alone international — trends were readily discernible, the government would not have had to reverse policies based on enlightened but mistaken views which it shared only last year with industry.

Mr. Goyer explains his own interest in the subject by noting that he continually faces the problem in spending one billion dollars as supply minister. One must know the strategic choices to determine a rational buying policy. He gives illustrations. Should preferences be given to firms actively involved in exporting Canadian products? Can we ignore regional development policy? What of the control of our economy?

JEAN-PIERRE GOYER

Such questions are not reassuring. They suggest that an "industrial strategy," in at least some minds, is verbal camouflage for protection. A first priority is to be efficient production. Good. But is the government, after subsidizing firms into production for reasons of regionalism, then to go on subsidizing them at the expense of the taxpayer by purchasing their products at unnecessarily high prices?

Turning to international trade, Mr. Goyer asks: "How can we even begin to discuss questions such as the auto pact, energy and so forth, on a piecemeal basis without first agreeing on basic principles that are in harmony with an overall Canadian industrial strategy?" Perhaps the question is rehetorical as discussion often seems interminable. But it does point to a vexing problem.

The federal government, in its own sphere, has proceeded with caution and on the basis of many studies in respect to the Mackenzie pipeline (or pipelines). This accords with Mr. Goyer's emphasis on priorities and the limited financial resources likely to be available.

Presumably, however, an "overall" strategy must also take account of the James Bay energy project which is larger, more demanding, and going ahead at this moment. Yet this is a purely Quebec affair; it was merely announced ex cathedra by Robert Bourassa and the federal stand on it remains vague; varying between indulgent acquiescence and "don't blame us."

Grand Talk

Industrial strategists usually meet such objections by talking grandly about consultation with the provinces, co-ordination of objectives, etc., etc. But James Bay, from this standpoint, is merely the latest aggression. It was W. A. C Bennett, a decade ago, who showed the way in such matters, with his giant dams and two-river policy. How is it to be arranged that future provincial premiers, perhaps not yet in political view, will be more co-operative strategists than those of the past and those currently arranging our affairs?

Mr. Goyer sums up by declaring roundly that "there is no place today for resistance to change." Surely something depends on the changes which the minister has in mind, now that he has been shifted from his former duties as solicotor-general to a financial post.

There is, after all, the rather notable fact that Mr. Turner has abandoned some of the tax reforms which aroused resistance in Mr. Benson's day. If resistance was wrong and out of place, how does it happen that Eugene Whelan, now minister of agriculture, has been assuring his audiences, including participants in a lobster supper at Malpeque last Friday, that: "Dropping the capital gains tax on farms passed from father to son is a step in the right direction."

Was resistance right in this important and recent case in spite of the scriptwriters? Or did Mr. Whelan falter in face of so many lobsters at the current impressive prices?

WILLIAM R. FRYE

Asia's Shaky Chance of Peace

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The task which Henry Kissinger resumes this week in Paris — that of ending the fighting in Indo-China — is extraordinarily delicate and difficult. But it is not as impossible as it seemed only a short time ago.

Despite the jolt of prospective Canadian withdrawal from a truce-supervision role, there have been several developments in recent days and weeks which have fanned a spark of hope. For example:

● There are signs of incipient negotiation between the two men who, probably alone, are capable of ending the ground fighting in Cambodia: Marshal Lon Nol, the present head of state there, and Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the man he ousted.

Sihanouk said in Morocco this past week that he would "never negotiate" with Lon Nol. But he has been known to change his mind. And there are available intermediaries.

Formidable Pressure

● Canada's announcement that she will withdraw from the International Commission for Supervision and Control (ICSC) not later than the end of July represents formidable pressure on its Communist members, Hungary and Poland, to let the commission operate more normally. If they do not, it may be impossible to replace Canada, and the commission will die.

Even before Ottawa's withdrawal announcement, there were signs that Canadian complaints of Communist sabotage had begun to take effect. Hungary and Poland backed away from efforts to veto ICSC agendas. It was a small step, far from enough to render the ICSC effective, but it may have been a straw in the wind.

● Evidence suggests that the North Vietnamese are not now planning a major military offensive in the South in the near future.

Some air-raid shelters in Hanoi are reportedly being dismantled, indicating confidence that American raids will not be resumed. and the Communist buildup of heavy weapons in the South last March and April is now being interpreted as probably defensive.

What renders all this inconclusive are the attitudes of three other important centres of power: Saigon, Peking and the United States Congress.

President Thieu minimizes the significance of Kissinger's most recent agreements with Hanoi's Le Duc Tho, which were negotiated in mid-May and are due to be wrapped up this coming week.

Whether Thieu will actually sabotage them is unclear; but he obviously is dragging his heels. Under present circumstances, he probably will go as far as he dares to negate their effect.

NORODOM SIHANOUK
. . . Chinese influence

China, for its part, is close to Prince Sihanouk, and could powerfully influence his approach to negotiations with Lon Nol.

If Sihanouk insists on holding aloof, or — having decided to negotiate — if he holds out for total, effective power in Cambodia, a deal will be impossible. But if he is willing to settle for a nominal, ceremonial role, he might still — despite all that has happened — regain his throne.

Negotiations for his restoration are likely to revolve, at their core, around the selection of men who, under a ceremonial Sihanouk, would exercise real power. This selection, in turn, will depend heavily on the balance of military power in the field.

That is why the White House is so concerned over efforts in Congress to force an end to American air support for Lon Nol's armies. Without such support, Lon Nol would be on the way to certain defeat, and his bargaining power would evaporate.

Indeed, there might never be any meaningful negotiations; the Reds would simply wait for him to fall. And a Communist-controlled Cambodia would make it virtually impossible for South Vietnam to survive.

Reason to Help

What is needed is constructive pressure from (and on) all three interrelated sides: China, Thieu and Congress.

China will have reason to help with a Cambodian settlement when Peking sees a Soviet-American detente (which China fears) growing ever more imminent, as it is likely to do during the June 18-26 Nixon-Brezhnev summit. To Chou En-lai, Sihanouk's pretensions must be expendable.

Thieu can probably be brought along with the Kissinger-Le Duc Tho agreements for Vietnam if he does not have to live under the threat of Communist assaults from across the border in Cambodia — that is to say, if there is a satisfactory Cambodian settlement.

But Congress seems determined to provide the Communists with an irresistible temptation to fight on in Cambodia. Removal of the fact (and threat) of American bombing would have precisely that effect.

It would be sad if the United States Congress, believing (among other things) that it was advancing the cause of peace, in fact undermined a good chance to achieve that goal. But as of this writing, that seems to be exactly what is happening.

Concert Hall

Recently we attended a Symphony Orchestra performance under the able direction of that talented conductor, Mitch Miller, at the Arena. While we thoroughly enjoyed this concert, and Mitch in particular, we could not help but feel ashamed at the surroundings to which this celebrated conductor had been invited to perform. The acoustics and seating arrangements left much to be desired.

What suitable building have we in Victoria to attract such events as this?

The "Royal"—a good old has-been, but not suitable for present day needs.

The "McPherson"—again much too small.

This is the Capital City of Victoria. Is there not a group of business people, doctors or lawyers who have, and still are making a good living here, and have the money needed, and who are really interested enough in this city to make a safe investment of a modern convention hall for this their own Capital City?

To those interested, a trip to Winnipeg to see the most up-to-date Convention Hall in Canada may inspire the group to go even one better for Victoria. Here's hoping.—Griff Owens, 107-1013 Vancouver St.

NEW YORK — The Journal of Commerce says: "Bank officials at this centre are more than usually concerned at reports they have been receiving from Canada. Canadian banks have withdrawn their balances at New York to an unusually low point and they also have small supplies of free funds in London. This movement on the part of banks is considered precautionary as an indication that the unbridled boom that Canada has been enjoying during the last few years is coming to its natural close."

WIRETAPPING MODES have been of increasing interest to Canadian legislators and law enforcers. Here, last year, Toronto Mayor William Dennison (right) and Judge Charles Bick tested wiretapping equipment at a council meeting after a police commission plea for tougher legislation to control use of such devices.

'Dirty Business' Comes of Age

By JOHN MacKENZIE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In 1931, Attorney General Mitchell — William Mitchell of Minnesota — overruled J. Edgar Hoover and for the first time authorized and directed the young Bureau of Investigation to engage in wiretapping.

Hoover, who had ruled out wiretapping as intolerable and ineffective, disclosed in that year that his bureau had conducted only three wiretaps in the previous seven years — all unknown to him at the time, all for petty crimes and producing petty results — while agents of the Lawless Bureau of Prohibition were indulging in massive taps and acquiring the same reputation as their bootlegger targets.

Small Beginnings

From these small beginnings, and under the edict that only "serious crimes" of great national magnitude would be investigated with wiretaps, the "dirty business" condemned by Justices Holmes and Brandeis has come a long way.

Aided by an improved technology, blessed by the United States Congress under certain conditions and condoned in others, approved by federal judges in hundreds of court orders, wiretapping has never before had such respectability. President Nixon's approval of eavesdropping on National Security Council employees makes him only the most recent of presidents since Franklin D. Roosevelt to find the practice indispensable for national, or White House security.

Yet wiretapping has also produced a growing uneasiness fed by the sensational disclosures of Watergate and the Daniel Ellsberg trial. Questions are being asked:

—It is inevitable that a covert eavesdropping system designed to protect America from foreign espionage will be turned upon her own citizens?

—Has Congress made individuals more secure by legalizing some wiretapping, outlawing some and leaving the hardest problems for the courts?

—Can any controls be placed on rampant wirtapping and bugging without enormous political costs to those who try to impose restraints?

—Will Americans, jealous of their "privacy" but anxious also about their "security," ever be willing to renounce wiretapping?

The questions are still unanswered and the United States today seems farther than ever from a truly national policy on the value to be placed on privacy. Thus far, as usual, the elements of society most alarmed about wiretapping are the same civil libertarians who have always been alarmed.

Damage Suit

Morton Halperin, the former National Security Council staff member whose home telephone was wiretapped in what the Nixon administration calls a search for security leaks, may not wait for more events to unfold. He met last week with lawyers, including attorneys' association with the American Liberties Union, to explore the prospects for a civil damage suit.

A suit by Halperin, which other tap victims both in government and the news media might imitate or join, could provide the much anticipated test of the administration's assertion of the right to condcut unsupervised wiretapping in a field it defines as "foreign intelligence." It is far from clear how the courts would rule.

The question of warrantless executive wiretaps was settled in the "domestic subversion" area of national security by a unanaimous supreme court a year ago.

With Justice Lewis Powell Jr. writing for the court and jutice Willian Rehnquist not participating, the court held, 8 to 0, that a judicial warrant, akin to those issued under the 1968 Safe Streets Act for crimes like gambling and narcotics, must be obtained before agents may tap or bug suspected American radicals unconnected to any foreign power.

Powell laid to rest the justice department's argument that the 1968 act itself, by disclaiming any intention to limit presidential wiretap powers in national security matters, had recognized the existence of such power. On the contrary, said the court, congress merely left that question where it found it — undergoing intense debate in court litigation.

HOOVER

dream. The prize: Actual damages starting at $100 for each day of unlawful intrusion, punitive damages to make an example of the losers, and reimbursement for legal expenses. The significance: Vindication of the right to privacy in a manner that would hurt the personal pocketbook of anyone violating that right.

G. Robert Blakey, a principal draftsman of the 1968 wiretap law on the staff of Sen. John McClellan (D-Ark.), thinks so highly of the provision for civil redress that he has confided to friends that he would enjoy trying just such a lawsuit.

According to Blakey and others, the existence of the act is a sign of national health, not a symptom of a disease, proving that laws now on the books may yet prove adequate protection for individual liberties.

That view is contradicted by Herman Schwartz, law professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo, who lays much of the problem at the feet of the 1968 law.

Gates Are Open

"Allowing this stuff at all has really opened the floodgates," says Schwartz. "Making wiretapping legitimate in 1968 means that it was a bastard before that. Especially when it's extended to national security, there is no restraint except self-restraint, and we know how effective that is."

Schwartz charges that even the claims of effectiveness for conventional, court-ordered taps have been exaggerated. This, too, flatly disputes Blakey and McClellan, who insist that a high percentage of "incriminating" conversations are overheard on judicially approved taps of gamblers and drug pushers.

For Schwartz, the most promising safeguard is Congressional oversight of the sort some committees intermittently exercise in Central Intelligence Agency matters. Some such proposals are being readied in congress but passage seems distant.

Other wiretap critics contend that judicial controls, including warrants for justifiable intelligence tapping, should not be written off without more examination.

Nathan Lewin, a Washington lawyer who has represented both the government and private citizens in privacy fights, contends that "at least there could be a record somewhere in a court and you wouldn't have to count on the luck of finding it in a White House file," the way the FBI found records of a wiretap on Halperin in which Pentagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg was overheard.

Justification

Walter Slocombe, a Washington attorney who has worked on Henry Kissinger's national security council staff, adds that judicial scrutiny would at least require the government to come up with some justification and would prevent some officials from inventing "improved" justifications at some later date.

Former Attorney General John Mitchell argued that judges weren't equipped to evaluate the need for security measures and warned of national weakness "if the authority to issue a warrant in national security cases is to be vested in magistrates only."

To which Justice Powell replied in last year's "domestic radicals" case: "If the threat is too subtle or complex for our senior law enforcement officers to convey the significance to a court, one may question whether there is probable cause for surveillance."

MINI-NUKE: The General's Dream

By JAMES EAYRS

Worry much about The Bomb? If so, it's probably the hydrogen kind. You fret lest some nuclear age Lear fall prey at last to that death-wish the mood of which the lyrics of Randy Newman's song "Political Science" capture so perfectly:

We give them money—But are they grateful? No, they're spiteful and they're hateful.

They don't respect us—so let's surprise them—We'll drop the Big One and pulverize them . . .

But it's not the "Big One" that worries NATO planners these days. It's the Small One.

From those wonderful folks who gave you the hydrogen bomb comes the first truly compact, portable, easy-to-handle nuclear weapon. Call it Mini-Nuke, colour it red—foor danger.

Mini-Nuke's a general's dream. With it his field commanders may lob on some target of opportunity—a bridge, a dam, a tank formation—a nuclear explosion with the equivalent of no more than 50 tons of TNT. The current generation of so-called tactical nuclear weapons—of which some 7,000 are deployed in Western Europe—can't get much below 1000 tons.

But the very features that make Mini-Nuke a general's dream—its precision on the battlefield, its ability to deliver blast, radiation or fallout in the proportions selected by the sender—make it a statesman's nightmare.

Mini-Nuke obscures all but to the vanishing-point that crucial distinction between weapons that are thought to be conventional and weapons that are thought to be something else.

Why is that distinction crucial? Because upon its preservation depends our chances not just of avoiding what are called—much too cavalierly called—"nuclear skirmishes," but of avoiding Armageddon.

There is a rival doctrine. Nuclear weapons, it contends, are just like any other weapons. You use them when the price is right. No submarine commander would waste a valuable torpedo on a trawler. He'd be glad to fire it at a tanker.

The first to suggest in public that the price could be right for a battlefield nuclear explosion was a chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, as long ago as October 1949. "The atomic bomb has been thought of as exclusively a strategic, offensive weapon," wrote General Omar Bradley in The Saturday Evening Post. "It could not stop invading armies well spread out. But suppose," the General argued, "the defenders can stop the initial rush and set up a strongly held defensive line. The only way to crack such a line is to concentrate heavy forces for a breakthrough. These concentrations would provide a target for the skillful use of atomic weapons on the tactical defensive."

Opportunity knocked soon enough. The appearance late in 1950 of half a million Chinese troops on the Korean battlefield presented a tempting target for U.S. atomic weapons. At a press conference on November 30, President Truman remarked that the use of such weapons was under "active consideration."

These words caused consternation round the world, nowhere more than in Ottawa. "The military authorities may argue that the atomic bomb is just another weapon", L. B. Pearson wrote in a message to the U.S. State Department.

"But in the minds of ordinary people everywhere in the world, it is far more than that. It is universally regarded as the ultimate weapon. It should be treated as such."

For a time this view prevailed, but only for five years. "In any combat where these things can be used on strictly military targets and for strictly military purposes", President Eisenhower declared on March 17, 1955, "I see no reason why they should not be used just exactly as you would use a bullet or anything else."

Had the tactical nuclear weapons to which Eisenhower was referring been at Truman's disposal too, the Korean War would probably have turned atomic. "These things" were nuclear artillery shells small enough to be fired from 4-inch cannon and having an explosive force equivalent to about 3000 tons of TNT.

Here, it seemed, was NATO's answer to the Soviet hordes. "I want to make it absolutely clear, the Alliance's deputy Supreme Commander, Field Marshall Montgomery, proclaimed in a widely quoted speech, "that we at SHAPE are basing all our operational planning on using atomic weapons in our own defence. With us it is not any longer 'They may possibly be used'. It is very definitely 'They will be used, if we are attacked'."

But dwellers on future atomic battlefields — the Rhine, the Ruhr, the North German plain — found naught for their comfort in such doctrine. The results of the first NATO exercise in which tactical nuclear weapons were presumed to have been used were disquieting in the extreme: a million and a half German civilians would have been killed, three and a half million more injured. This seemed an odd way to defend civilization.

The NATO countries could, but would not, match the Red Army man for man. They clung instead to the doctrine of limited atomic war, the U.S. kept pouring in the warheads.

But by then — the early 1960s — the Red Army had tactical warheads too. If NATO opened nuclear fire the Russians would reply in kind. A skirmish would soon become a holocaust.

Discovery of Greek Pottery Brings Charges of Looting

By RICHARD WALTER
The Observer

Italian experts and police have recovered 15 fragments of a massive Greek vase of precisely the same kind as the $1 million Calyx Krater, of Euphronious, the Athenian potter and vase painter of the fifth century BC, recently acquired by the Metropolitan Museum in New York. The acquisition caused a storm of charges that it had been recently looted from an Etruscan tomb, north of Rome.

It was originally claimed that this fresh cache of fragments also came from the same illicit tomb-robbing, near Ceveterl, where the major part of the Metropolitan's vase is said to have first been seen. Experts are now questioning if this new "find" was not deliberately planted to cause confusion in the inquiry already started over the Metropolitan vase under Dr. Guido Guasco, Procurator-General of Civitavecchia. Experts who have examined the new fragments now believe that they could be missing parts of one of the partial remains of a Calyx Krater by Euphronios that has been in the collection of Greek vases in the Louvre, in Paris, for close to a century.

At least one other batch of likely-looking fragments had been recovered earlier and handed over to the police conducting the investigations. Thermoluminescent testing and evaluation by Professor Arias at Pisa University, revealed that at least some of these might well have come from the Euphronios vase in the Metropolitan Museum in New York still currently styled by Museum staff and public alike as their "hot-pot."

There is no indication in Rome that the Italian authorities have the slightest intention of dropping the charges, or the investigation, in the light of the new discoveries. On the contrary, several lines of inquiry are being pressed forward and will in all likelihood result in a request for a full judicial inquiry that would seek U.S. Government intervention in granting the Italian authorities the opportunity to make a close examination both of the Metroplitan's vase and the circumstances of its recent restoration in Switzerland and acquisition by the Metropolitan, accounted until recently the richest and most powerful museum in the world.

The fundamental issue in the Metropolitan's Greek vase scandal is one of ethics. Robert Hecht, the American dealer who sold the vase to the Metropolitan for $1 million, was at the time still facing charges in Italy relating to the illegal traffic of works of art. Now he faces further charges there over the vase itself.

On their admission, the Director of the Metropolitan Museum, Thomas Hoving, his Chief Curator, Theodore Roussseau, and the Curator of the Museum's Greek and Roman Department, Dietrich von Bothmer, arranged a meeting to view the vase with Hecht while it was partially restored and displayed in the back garden of a Swiss art restorer. They have described how it was at this point that the price, and, they say, the provenance of the vase, was discussed.

From the outset, the museum had challenged those who think the vase was looted "indecently, recently" from an Etruscan tomb to prove their case. The only importance of really getting to the bottom of the affair is no longer a question that concerns just one individual art acquisition by an American museum, but the ethical standards now being demanded internationally in the face of the increasingly widespread archaeological looting and the illicit traffic in stolen works of art. The determination and resource of the Italian authorities to prove their case has, if anything, been strengthened by the new development. The $1 million Metropolitan Greek vase may yet prove to be the turning-point to a far more widespread acceptance of these much-sought standards.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Washington youth received his father's graduation present just in time to catch the boat back for the cap and gown ceremonies Tuesday.

Allan M. Weitz, used the $100 present to pay a $75 fine in provincial court here after he was arrested Monday for possession of marijuana.

Weitz was touring Victoria with a group of high school students and was to have caught the boat back later Monday afternoon in time to attend graduation ceremonies, but he was arrested at 2:15 p.m., in Centennial Square.

"I had intended to return home yesterday about 5 p.m.," he told Provincial Court Judge William Ostler Tuesday adding he could pay a fine because his father had agreed to wire him $100.

★ ★ ★

An 18-year-old Victoria girl who was arrested for possession of MDA May 16 was sentenced to four months in prison and one year's probation.

"You were arrested with 40 caps of MDA and in your view it's your own affair," Ostler said to Wendy J. Moyes, of 3087 Irma St.

He said a term at the Lower Mainland Region Correctional Centre would "assist you to break your drug habit—a habit court was told that started in Grade 9 and included MDA, speed and heroin.

A 17-year-old youth who stole a total of $8.05 from fellow employees April 12 and 13 was given a suspended sentence and a one-year probation term.

Ostler said he had considered giving Keith F. Fletcher, of 1209 Pearce, a term in the forestry camp, but changed his mind when he learned Fletcher had been accepted for a logging course at a vocational school.

★ ★ ★

Joseph W. Hachey, 29, of no fixed address, was sentenced to one month in prison after he attempted to steal a car valued at $300 which was parked at 700-block Cormorant June 4.

★ ★ ★

A former Edmonton resident who asked that two charges be laid against him on the eve of his release from prison June 19 was sentenced to one month in prison concurrent on each charge.

Raymond D. Brown pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and hashish Nov. 2 in Edmonton.

A 19-year-old Toronto youth who "did not realize the law was so heavy on weed here," was fined $75 for possession of marijuana.

Alan G. Arnette was stopped by police Monday at Fort and Langley, three days after he arrived in Victoria.

★ ★ ★

A 25-year-old Victoria man who admitted a former heroin habit of 25 to 30 caps a day was sentenced to six months is prison for possession of the drug Oct. 12.

The sentence will be served consecutively with a two-year's-less-a-day term Richard V. Fraser, is serving on a previous possession charge.

★ ★ ★

Frank Borthwick Colli was fined $400 and given a 10-month probation term after he was found guilty of shoplifting articles valued at $3.65 from Woodwards' March 13.

Colli, 53, of 2529 Garden, appeared in the court section of Judge F. S. Green charged with theft under $200.

A 17-year-old Victoria girl was ordered to return to Merritt and live with her father after she pleaded guilty to a charge of break-in and theft May 1 at Menzies Fish and Chips.

Ostler also ordered a suspended sentence and one year's probation for Tina Sheena, of 425 Wilson, after she admitted taking a number of food items.

Something New For Student Actors

The school wanted an entry in the Greater Victoria schools Drama Festival and, because Skinner had been active in theatre in Missouri where he had formerly taught, he was asked to take on the project.

"I began looking for a script," he said "and could find nothing that was right for the age group — 11 to 15. So I decided to write my own."

It was a case of a need existing and of creative action to fill the need.

THREE CHOSEN

Skinner has continued to provide plays for his students and in five years Glenlyon has had three chosen for drama festival honor performances and two on the recommended list.

Also among the casts of his plays there have been four "best junior actor" awards and one runner-up.

This week two of his plays, The Light, and The Wheelchair, will be seen on a youth theatre program at Langham Court Theatre.

The plays will be performed Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

All three plays received high commendation from Esse Ljungh of UVic Theatre department when they were produced in the recent Schools Drama Festival.

AN ORIGINAL

The third play, Passacaglia, is also an original by Victoria's Joan Mason Hurley. It is directed by Clara Hare and is a production of Norfolk House girls' school.

SKINNER

Ronne Way Jr. directed The Light for Oak Bay Junior Secondary.

Concerning The Wheelchair, a joint presentation by Norfolk and Glenlyon, the author says it was his idea that the two schools should get together because he was anxious to write something for a mixed cast.

He is enthusiastic about the three-night run at Langham Court, partly because it gives the students an opportunity to realize how differently audiences can react to the same play.

The experience of having a run is quite different to the single shot of a festival performane, he points out.

Proceeds of the ticket sale — no reservations but the tickets can be picked up in advance at Eaton's box office — will go to UVic theatre department's bursary fund for this summer's theatre workshop for high school students.

Skinner draws the ideas for his plays from real life incidents or circumstances that affect, interest and do happen to children.

Although The Wheelchair is concerned with a more sophisticated topic — euthanasia — mostly the youngsters' acting roles are based on experience.

And they contribute something of themselves to the scripts.

"That's not the way we say it," they tell him, and they offer their own version which immediately is written in.

Skinner feels the plays do much to tell adult audiences about the way youngsters react in given situations.

INSIGHT

He tries to have the plays provide insight and understanding of some specific situation as well as self-understanding for the cast members.

The result is a highly palatable measure of life education — "with a capital E," says Skinner.

The playwright quite frequently turns actor and spends a good many extra curricular hours rehearsing. He was last seen and scored a personal success in Victoria Theatre Guild's Oh What a Lovely War.

Previously, this spring, he had played Fagin in Victoria Operatic Society's production of Oliver, and has appeared in UVic theatre and Victoria Fair productions.

Buccaneers Set For Their Days

Crowning of the Buccaneer Queen at 7 p.m. June 15 will open Esquimalt's three-day Buccaneer Days festival at the Esquimalt Municipal Sports Centre.

The coronation will be followed by a display by the Esquimalt and Saanich Lionettes Baton Corps, a Sunset Ceremony by the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Rainbow and a teen dance at 8:30 p.m.

A pancake breakfast at the sports centre June 16 will be served from 7 till noon.

The parade down Esquimalt Road from Dominion to Admirals begins at 10:30 a.m. that day, with presentation of parade trophies at the sports centre about noon.

In the afternoon there will be a band and drill contest, other contests and games, and a salmon barbecue at the sports centre.

At Bullen Park there will be a marching band contest starting at 12:15 p.m. and a sports program starting at 1:30 p.m.

A golden age tea will be held at 2 p.m., along with a garden club flower show at Jubilee Hall.

That evening at 7 there will be a variety concert at the sports centre, followed by an adult dance at 9 at which everyone should wear a costume. A senior citizens' dance at Jubilee Hall will start at 7:30 p.m.

In Kinsmen Gorge Park there will be races and a tug-of-war at 1 p.m. and canoe races at 2:30 p.m.

Various children's rides and concessions will be set up for the festival. The closing band concert by the Naden Band will start at 3 p.m. in the band shell.

Banner Year for B.C. Lumber Seen From U.S. House Starts

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Housing starts in the United States are running 15 per cent above expectations, indicating another banner year for British Columbia's forestry industry.

The housing boom means the U.S. will import about 9 billion board feet of lumber from Canada, rather than the 8 billion forecast six months ago.

Most of this lumber comes from British Columbia which relies heavily upon the forest industry as a basis for general economic strength.

Housing starts in the U.S. totalled 488,100 in the first quarter of this year, well above the 425,000 expected.

The starts include all construction on single-family and multiple family dwellings and apartments, with a 20-suite apartment counting as 20 housing starts.

The surge of prosperity for the B.C. forestry industry in 1972 was based upon a record 2.4 million housing starts in the U.S., plus strong demand for lumber in Japan and Europe.

The increased demand followed three years of moderate demand and low prices.

However, at the end of 1972, fears were expressed by the industry that the U.S. had surplus accommodation as a result of the boom and housing starts would only total 2 million in 1973.

At their rate in the first quarter, they will hit 2.3 million this year, almost matching the astounding level of 1972.

B.C. forestry industry spokesmen, ever cautious, are revising their estimates upwards to 2.2 million housing starts this year and gearing up for additional exports to the U.S.

The high level of demand for lumber will keep wholesale prices at or near their current levels.

Lumber shipped to the U.S. by water hit an all-time record price level in May.

It is currently in a period of "adjustment" meaning down about $10 on prices around $210 per thousand board feet. A further slide could have been anticipated if demand slackened. However, the continuing high demand is expected to hold prices firm, which means give or take $15 per thousand.

One company spokesman said: "You have to remember that the price of lumber bounces around like the Dow Jones average. Because of the continuing high demand, however, we are looking forward to relative stability in price."

Meanwhile, in the interior of B.C., lumber shipped to the U.S. by rail has undergone much sharper price fluctuations because sales are made on a shorter term basis.

Rail-borne lumber prices peaked out in February and have fluctuated sharply since that time but this week were back close to February's record levels.

British Columbia's own housing starts in the first quarter of 1973 were 6,010, down 14.8 per cent from the same time last year.

The statistic is of greater interest to the B.C. construction industry than for lumber producers who sell the bulk of their production in the export market.

The drop in B.C. housing starts was due to a decline in apartment construction. Starts of single family dwellings totalled 3,323 in the first quarter, up 13.9 per cent over the same period in 1972.

Reserves Rise

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's gold and foreign currency reserves rose by $621 million in May to reach a total of $6.739 billion, the treasury has announced.

But a government spokesman said $332 million of the increase was accounted for by dollar loans raised by publicly owned British bodies.

The May increase followed a rise of $82 million in April, which again was mainly accounted for by public-sector borrowing of foreign currency.

Prospects 'Encouraging'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Board president Alan Campney told the Vancouver Board of Trade Monday that prospects for expanding Canadian trade with the eastern European bloc are encouraging.

Campney led a recent trade and goodwill mission of Vancouver businessmen to Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary and Romania.

"On the basis of quick impressions, I think the Bulgarians showed the most genuine interest in increasing trade relationships with Canada," he said.

The Canadian government's recently-concluded trade agreements with several of the nations probably made them more receptive to the mission, he added.

Campney said joint ventures with foreign business firms is a new idea for most of the countries. Except in Romania, where foreigners are allowed to hold up to 49 per cent of the equity, their participation is limited to debt financing, he said.

The board of trade president said difficulties encountered in trading with the countries, arise mainly from the non-convertibility of currencies.

"Individual currencies are not convertible among the countries within the group let alone into other foreign currencies," Campney said, adding the countries are aiming for a common currency.

FISH SALES BOOM

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wholesale value of British Columbia fish products marketed in 1972 reached a new record high of $159 million, fisheries service statistics show.

The products include 6.9 million pounds of halibut valued at $4.3 million, caught by B.C. fishermen and landed at U.S ports. The previous record total was $223.7 million, marketed in 1966.

High prices for practically all types of fish and the largest chum salmon return since 1954 combined to make the record year.

Fishermen's earnings at $75.1 million were the highest ever, about $16.5 million more than 1971 and $13.7 million above the 1966 record of $61.4 million.

Landings of 164.4 million pounds of salmon worth a record $50.3 million were 9.9 million pounds and $5.3 million greater than the record 1970 landings. The wholesale value exceeded all previous years and was valued at $114.3 million, $14.3 million greater than 1968, the highest value of any previous year.

Of the other major species, wholesale value of halibut in 1972 was $16,904,000; herring, $12,612,000; grey cod, $3,428,000; tuna, $3,088,000; crab and shrimp, $1,730,000; and sole, $1,504,000.

Saanich to Rescue Of Summer Festival

A $5,830 Saanich grant has saved the Victoria Summer Festival.

The grant is twice what council had anticipated earlier, having based its contributions on a figure provided by Intermunicipal Committee, which said the municipalities were to share $7,500.

In fact, the required sum was $15,000, without which the program would be in jeopardy, council was told.

In a submission to finance committee, Victoria Symphony conductor Laszlo Gati said the $45,000 original budget for the festival had been cut back to $32,000 by eliminating administration costs entirely (the Symphony Society will pick up the tab); trimming solo artists, rehearsals, program variety and publicity material.

Substantial grants are made by the B.C. Culture Fund and Canada Council, with the balance divided between the municipalities. Esquimalt has refused participation.

Gati said the program is independent of the symphony, although the symphony's services are used.

If the musicians cannot be paid adequately the festival risked the loss of some who would elect to take holidays instead, Gati said.

"If you don't accept the grant we will be in a very uncomfortable position . . . We will be at least $4,500 short and the whole program will be in jeopardy," the conductor said.

It was too late to ask the culture fund for more, he said.

Three double concerts are planned for Heritage Court at the Provincial Museum each week for a total of 30 in the season, with two a week in Beacon Hill Park, Oak Bay and Saanich between July 16 and Aug. 12.

Gati said Saanich concerts might be held at Beaver Lake and Cedar Hill Community Centre, and Ald. Alan Newberry said the Cedar Hill location would be "a good baptism for the new stage facilities" before a natural amphitheatre north of the building.

St. Ann's Farewell June 17

After 115 years of service to education in Victoria, the sisters are closing their school this month.

The arrival of the first Sisters of St. Ann in Victoria in 1858 was celebrated in a mass Tuesday in St. Andrew's Cathedral with Bishop Remi de Roo.

Those first nuns began teaching in a log cabin on the grounds of present academy. Enrolment increased over the years and many students attended from other parts of B.C. as well as foreign countries.

Lack of finances and declining enrolments in recent years forced the boarding facilities at the school to close two years ago, the elementary grades to be phased out slowly and now the secondary school, Grades 7 to 12, will also close.

The June 17 reunion will be at the academy from 2 to 5 p.m. A commemorative booklet is being prepared and will be issued in August.

UVic Grads Each Win $16,500

Two University of Victoria students will receive $16,500 scholarships to allow them to continue their graduate studies in science and mathematics.

W. J. Noble of Victoria and L. H. Redlin of Parksville, are among 49 Canadians to receive science scholarships from the National Research Council.

Noble will work in botany at the University of B.C. and Redlin will continue in mathematics at the University of Toronto.

The scholarships, which are the council's prestige awards for graduate students, mark the 50th anniversary of the council's scholarship program and commemorate Canadian Confederation.

The recipients will receive an annual grant of $5,500 for a three-year period, renewable for a fourth year if necessary. Academic fees and travel costs are also paid for by the council grants.

Nimpkish Starts Running in July

The 16-vehicle ferry will run between Sointula and Alert Bay from Port McNeill on Vancouver Island, allowing the British Columbia Ferry Island Princess to run only between Kelsey Bay and Beaver Cove.

'This—a Beer to Remember'

By BARBARA REHM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Israel Karp pounded his fist on the table, took a long swallow of the golden beer and swilled it across his tongue.

"Ah, that's beer all right," he sighed. "My first in 51 years."

He shook his head furiously and toasted an unseen audience. "L'chaim. To life!" he cried. "A few beers mean nothing when you're a kid. But this — a beer to remember."

It was March 1922 when the doors at Dannemora State Prison clanged shut behind Israel Karp. He was 17 — convicted of second degree murder for shooting his boss.

Bloomers were going for 5 cents at Lord and Taylor. Prohibition agents kept raiding Jimmy Kelley's down on Hester Street. Mayor John Hylan was cleaning Tammany Hall and Israel Karp was making $17 a week as a shipping clerk.

Now 68, a bristling skeleton of a man, Karp slowly walked out of prison into the late afternoon.

The Empire State Building has been built, the World Trade Centre's topped off. Telephones and televisions are in nearly every home, and every bar serves cold beer.

"Yep, it's all changed. I expected it would. Yep, it's changed all right. I see the world changes. Time goes on without you," Karp says in his Brooklyn staccato.

"I didn't think I'd ever get out to see it, so I have no complaints with life. At my age, you can't complain. Life comes as it comes," he says. "I'm glad for this."

'He Could Have Been Free Long Ago But Nobody Wanted Him...'

At age 17, Israel Karp, one of five children of a Brooklyn widow, shot and killed his boss. The date was March 7, 1922. "I never fired a gun before that day. Not even at the shooting galleries on Coney Island," he says softly.

He does not even remember the boss' name now, nor the reason for the shooting.

In October 1933 Karp was declared legally sane. "He could have been free long ago," says prison Supt. J. Edwin Lavalle, "but nobody wanted him."

On May 5, 1973 Israel Karp was transferred from Dannemora to Sea View nursing home on Staten Island.

In all those 51 years none of his brothers and sisters came to see him.

"And I don't think they'll come to see me on Staten Island. They don't like the idea I commited murder. I'm supposed to be the black sheep of the family. But if they come, I'll receive them. I'll be civil."

In the dim corridors of the nursing home, Israel Karp gets ready for his first trip to the city in 51 years. He pulls on a frayed brown suit over dull blue pajamas.

"No point in takin' 'em off. I'll just be back in the joint in a few hours," he shrugs.

He fixes the battered felt brown hat on his head and walks slowly past the bed rows of old men.

"Sometime later," he says, "I'd like to live in the city. Just a small room somewhere to watch things. Everything. I missed a lot. I'd just like to watch things now.

"I'm 68 you know, 68. Not much time. But I have no complaints. I kept going then. Yep. Kept going all right. I'll keep going now.

"I'm lonesome, sometimes. But I try not to think about that."

He settles back for the drive into Manhattan, eyes darting furiously. "Boy, I feel like I'm in the free world again," he says.

Passing a cemetery on the outskirts of Brooklyn, Karp rubs the thick stubble on his face. "Cripes, it's been over 51 years. Someday I'll pay a visit to these cemeteries.

"I have some relatives there I never seen in my lifetime. If I can locate then, I'll look them up."

The afternoon is punctuated with Karp's hard, sharp sentences. "That's a toll machine. Yep. It's a toll machine alright. I read about 'em.

"That's a skyscraper. Yep. I know why they call it a skyscraper alright. It scrapes the sky. Alright. I read about them, too. And now I see."

Walking through the lower East Side, Karp bites his lips. "Not very familiar after so many years. I see the world changes."

He stops for a long while in Central Park, uncomfortable with the crowds, and bends down to a small child. "Hello there," he says, and the child races away.

In 1922 elevated trains roared down Sixth Avenue and mounted police directed traffic. "I see that's gone," Karp says. "Yep. I see that's all gone.

"Now there's so many people. People everywhere. And buildings cover everything. It's all crowded now. I need to watch it to know if I like it.

"Yep, it's different. One has to expect it.

"You know, I don't think I'll bother with any women now. At my age, hello and good day should just about do it. I haven't thought about a woman for as long as I can remember."

Karp cranes his neck around street corners and buildings looking for something misplaced, something familiar. "I feel like I'm in the wrong place," he sighs.

The warehouse where he used to work is gone. In its place is a Chinese laundry and a row of crumbling buildings.

"I look at this," he says softly, "and it makes me think if I'll ever be free."

He asks to be taken back to Sea View.

Karp hangs up his brown suit and felt hat. Standing again in his pajamas and shoes, he looks at the rows of men and stuffs a kosher salami into his locker.

He sits on the edge of the bed and turns to the window. "Looks like rain," he says, "maybe thunderstorms," and pulls up the thin blanket.

Alta. Probes Justice

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government, which has faced an almost ceaseless barrage of criticism in the legislature over civil rights, has announced a sweeping look into the administration of justice in the lower courts.

Government leaders said no dozens of times when asked in the legislature this spring whether they would call a royal commission or public inquiry into the administration of justice in the province.

But Tuesday, Attorney-General Merv Leitch announced that a three-man "board of review" had been established by the cabinet as a forum for public discussion of reforms in the provincial court system.

The government avoided calling the review an inquiry, even though it was appointed under the Public Inquiries Act.

The board, headed by Mr. Justice W. J. C. Kirby of the trial division of the Alberta Supreme Court, is empowered to investigate the courts and any other matters deemed relevant to a full and fair inquiry.

Rail Rates Cut

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — CNR president Norman MacMillan said Tuesday that selective increases in freight rates since 1967 have attracted "a fair amount of attention," while equal attention has not been paid to price reductions made by railways.

"The fact is that the overall cost of rail transportation to shippers has been going down, and not up, since 1967," he told the annual meeting of the Canadian Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute.

Bargain Power Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Farmers should organize in order to obtain effective bargaining power, Argiculture Minister Sam Uskiw said Tuesday.

Speaking to delegates at the convention of the Manitoba Women's Institute at the University of Manitoba, Uskiw said the farmer must have bargaining power to be free of unfair economic pressures.

Water 'Pressure'

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton is using its position as the only water supplier to surrounding municipalities to pressure the province into taking action on its requst for boundary expansion, Alphonès Robert, secretary-treasurers of the municipal district of Sturgeon, said.

City council decided in March not to increase water services in any metro area until the appliant agrees to annexation to the city.

Unionist Defects

EDMONTON (CP) — The defection of the chairman of the Calgary local of the Civil Service Association of Alberta to the Canadian Union of Public Employees is insignificant, CSA president Bill Broad said.

Broad said the basis for Mervyn Keer's resignation — that the CSA was an ineffective bargaining agent — was inevitable because there are pockets of discontent in a large union.

Cowboy Film Set

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — An agreement has been reached to produce a feature movie about John Ware, a legendary black cowboy in southern Alberta, it was announced Tuesday.

Duane Forsyth of Welling, Alta., president of Chief Mountain Studios Ltd., said the agreement was signed with Maxine Samuels Production Ltd. of Montreal.

Playgirl Seized

CALGARY (CP) — Customs officers have seized 3,000 local copies of Playgirl magazine pending a federal ruling on whether the latest issue is "immoral and indecent."

The move is the latest in a series of magazine seizures by customs officials and Larry Shapiro of United News, Calgary distributor of Playgirl, says distributors consider it an infringment of the bill of rights and plan to protest to Ottawa.

$3 Wage Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba committee of the Communist Party of Canada has urged raising the minimum wage to $3 an hour from $1.75 and elimination of the province's five per cent sales tax.

McGee . . . After the Verdict, Tears of Relief

Dear Kris:

Listen, kid. Try and get thru this note as best you can. We all figured wrong and I am being taught a lesson in a jail. O.k. only 2 people know for sure what happened. God & I. You gotta die to learn.

No matter what happens to me because of this nitemare, try to remember me as the strength you thought I was.

When you feel there is nothing you can do, then try to comfort my dear old dad and brother. Try to tell my mom that I really love her. Tell my sister how much I loved all she has done for me and make sure Rose-Marie knows that I'm sorry things went this way.

Of most importance don't hate the crown as they only did their job and don't discredit Al Roger and Mr. Branson as they did their best.

Please don't hate or blame Larry Charlie or Marilyn as they all have good reason to themselves and that is the animal nature to survive.

Tho I am innocent of this charge try to pretend I am paying the price of all the bad I got away with.

But most of all try to realize that without your faith and support I may never have had the courage to see this ignomy thru. For this I'm forever in debt.

Control any hate that may affect you and vent your energy to your own well being.

I'll never forget you and once again: thanks

Love John (P.S. Put Pony to pasture)

Threats, Nightmares, an Image of Prisons

By BRUCE OBEE
Times staff

John McGee's horoscope Tuesday said "You will work your way out of a legal snarl."

He was acquitted on a charge of attempted murder the same day.

"I feel like buying a blowhorn, going up to Mount Douglas and yelling it all over the city," said McGee during an interview at his home today.

Since Jan. 23 — the day of the shooting which led to a charge of wounding with intent — McGee, 27, of 819 Condor, has been plagued by threats on his life, nightmares and images of a future in prison.

In fact, he was so uncertain of the trial outcome he wrote a letter to his girlfriend, Kris Eley, and left it in his house when he went to court to hear the verdict.

He first appeared in court Feb. 5 and the charge was raised to attempted murder of Charles Scarr. The following day he was released on $5,000 bail.

"All of a sudden Condor Street, maybe it's my imagination, but it seemed to turn into a super highway — and it's a dead end street."

"I had two threatening phone calls, one from a man and another from a woman . . . one said there was going to be a contract put on my life.

"Another said I'd better look over my shoulder wherever I go."

The woman next door got into the habit of running past McGee's house and the police kept a close watch from the lane near the backyard.

At parties he introduced himself by another name.

"I'd look at the faces of my friends and even though their voices were reassuring me, their faces said 'I wonder'."

McGee hasn't filled glass to the top for five months. His hands shook so much the liquid spilled out.

"The one thing I was scared of was losing my mind."

During one nightmare he "jumped out of bed and knocked over a table." Another night he dreamed he'd been shot and woke up with saliva dripping from his mouth.

"I thought it was blood.

"But the worst part was waiting for that jury. I was just sort of suspended. I was sitting in that little room playing scrabble, trying to make out the words 'not guilty'."

When the jury came in, "they seemed to be as stoic as tin soldiers. One woman, I can't remember what she looked like, but she looked over at me and smiled."

"I felt like I lost a thousand-pound weight off my head" when the verdict was announced. Actually McGee has lost 14 pounds since the beginning of the trial May 28.

After the verdict he went into the empty hall outside the courtroom and cried.

McGee, a gun collector since the age of 13, says he'll continue to collect them.

"I've been doing it so long it's become a part of me."

While awaiting trial "I wondered whether I'd ever reach the point where I'd hate guns . . . if I'd blame the gun.

"But I've always said that guns don't kill people. People kill people. A gun is not a weapon unless it's used as one."

His collection is insured for $4,000.

What lies ahead for McGee now?

As this reporter was leaving McGee's home early today, he stood on his front porch, looked up at an overcast sky and said, "It's a sunny day."

Miracles of Medicine But the Cold Goes On

As a yearly victim of the Summer or Pre-Summer Cold, an affliction that once more has me in its awful spell, I want to mutter a few words today on a subject that's near to the nostrils, if not the heart, of one in every seven citizens.

Pollen, people say, knowingly, but, gosh, I don't think we can blame the mayor for everything. (A touch of humor there and, Lord knows, it ain't easy.) Whatever it is — pollen, a virus or whatever — it takes five or six days out of my life and changes me from a relatively sweet-mannered human to a raging bear.

That may be, in fact, one of the reasons the thing knocks me out so completely. I waste an incredible amount of raw energy hating science and the medical profession so that any vitality that's left to me in this seasonal collapse of my upper respiratory tract is consumed in pure, double-distilled anger. Oh, I'm mean, I tell you.

The news, for example, that my own doctor is toasting himself beside a cool pool on Maui will automatically send my temperature up another full notch. I lie abed, counting the circles on the wallpaper pattern, thinking bitterly of all the world's medicine men as well-heeled playboys frolicking in the sun while humanity (me) is abandoned to its fate.

Any item concerning the latest miracle of modern science such as the Skylab delays my painful recovery at least a full day and sets me grumbling thickly about the madmen of the laboratories tinkering with insane improbables at the expense of millions of us doomed to a lifetime of this recurring agony.

Come back from Maui, come back from outer space, you fools, I croak through my Kleenex, and make your little boy well again.

It may be, as my wife has been heard to remark, that I am the world's most spectacular sufferer from this sort of infection. This, as I see it, only confirms my right as a spokesman, m'Lord, in the case against Medicine and Science.

It is surely the most under-estimated of all the ills that strike mankind. The symptoms — and it is all symptoms — leave the sufferer with a galaxy of weird sensations. The eyes burn like embers in a tub of wet macaroni. The delicate piping of the chest and throat feels as if it has been freshly sand-blasted. The nose becomes distended, hose-like and inflamed. The entire body is so langorous and weighted with insipid aches that the patient feels constantly as if he were being sat upon by Mama Cass.

Yet all of this has a perversely comic effect and explains why a man who has been drained of the will to live may be viewed by his loved ones with ill-concealed amusement.

There is, too, a mental syndrome beyond calculation, a nagging guilt complex compounded by the utter lack of sympathy from people who don't have a cold, themselves, at the time, and frankly suspect you of malingering.

The doctor, if he doesn't happen to be away on his yacht, may tell you that the cure, the only cure, is to lie flat on the withers and wait for Mother Nature to get around to your case. It is up to you to decide when this is effected. It is thus left to the individual to determing if he should creep back to the office and risk the complication of double pneumonia or whether to keep to his couch and risk being dropped six places in the promotion list.

He is thus aware at all times that, even if he survives, he's a sure loser. Since he will spend, on the average, a full two years of a normal lifetime in this wretched condition he may be forgiven for quietly contemplating euthenasia.

The low point in my own prolonged bout with The Thing came when the substitute doctor airily suggested I might steam my meaty proboscis over an inhalator containing benzoin.

Something stirred in my memory and when he'd gone, perhaps to Bermuda, I looked up an essay written nearly 40 years ago by St. Clair McKelway who, as a twice-a-year cold man, had actually entered a hospital to see what might be done for him.

Turned out to be almost nothing. The specialists themselves seemed to take it as their private little joke that they hadn't the faintest idea of what caused a cold or what to do about it. When asked about the benzoin, McKelway was told that its main effect was psychological because "it smells medical."

Here I was, 40 years later, supposedly in an enlightened age of medical onslaught against disease, still being conned by the same old routine. Weak as I was, I managed the energy to be wanly infuriated. This age-old curse, localized in an area not much more than a foot square, persists and is treated as efficiently by the Hopi witch-doctors as it is by the modern "miracle makers."

It isn't that I mind being sick so much. Being sick and mad at the same time takes it out of a man.

GORGE MURALS TO GO

Two murals painted on walls in Gorge Road Hospital's new wing will disappear under vinyl wallpaper, in the near future, hospital administrator Bill Morrison said today.

"I've called the painter in today to take a look at the walls," said Morrison.

The two murals, each covering a 25-foot wall in the wing's second and third floor dining rooms, were painted by Mexican-born artist Luis Merino under a Local Initiatives Project grant and finished May 31.

Merino was warned by Morrison last month that unless they were modified, one or more of the murals would have to be covered up. Merino said he had accommodated the administration as much as he could, and couldn't alter the murals any more.

"I've just had too many negative responses," said Morrison. Some patients refuse to look at the murals when they eat in the dining room.

Two Schools Become One

Belmont Senior Secondary and Elizabeth Fisher Junior Secondary will be combined this September to form one secondary school accommodating 1,500 Grade 8 to 12 students.

Only 50 feet separate the two school buildings on Jacklin Road and as of September, they will be wings of a consolidated Belmont Fisher Secondary.

The move will allow greater flexibility in use of staff and physical space, says John Holt, who is principal of Elizabeth Fisher and will take over administration of the combined school.

"We have highly qualified teachers in both schools and we hope to utilize their individual strengths as much as possible."

He hopes the enlarged school will provide better continuity for the students and allow a greater choice in courses.

A Grade 10 student who can handle some Grade 11 course would be able to do so, for example, while a Grade 11 student who fell behind on part of the Grade 10 curriculum could pick up on what he missed.

Some duplication of facilities and office staff will be eliminated in the consolidation but Holt says no cutbacks are foreseen.

Under the principal will be two vice-principals and one administrative assistant, each with equal administrative positions and some teaching duties.

The principal said it will take time to start moving classes between the two buildings and next year students will probably be generally situated in one of the two wings.

"But by September, 1974 we could be seeing all the social studies in one building, let's say, and all the science in another," Holt said.

Some arrangements will have to be made for a central administration, he said.

Doubledecker Buses Now Belong to Hydro

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The shares of London Omnibus Tours Ltd., the Victoria firm which pioneered double - decker sightseeing in North America 11 years ago, have been bought by B.C. Hydro.

Co-owner of the company, former city alderman Harold Olafson, confirmed today that the sale agreement was concluded Monday after weeks of negotiations. The basic assets involved are five buses.

Purchase price is not being disclosed, Olafson said, because Hydro is in negotiation with other companies and does not want to prejudice the outcome of those negotiations.

(A Times article last week reported the provincial government's intention to undertake a major expansion program of transit services on the Island, as part of which the government was ready to acquire any private company wanting to sell.

First indication of the sale surfaced Tuesday at a meeting of city council's public works and traffic committee, when traffic engineer Dave Campbell relayed an application from Royal Blue Lines, the Hydro subsidiary, to use the two parking spaces on the west side of the Causeway formerly allocated to London Omnibus Tours.

Campbell said the request followed the sale of the private company to Hydro.

The announcement was not greeted with enthusiasm. Ald. Alf Hood commented that if Hydro's buying spree continued, the city would soon end up with no licensing revenue from the provincial government at all.

This was a reference to a long-standing complaint at city hall, that Hydro does not pay the $140-per-vehicle licensing fee levied by the city on all sightseeing services. Hydro's solicitors maintain that the licences are covered by the hefty grant in lieu of taxes paid annually to Victoria.

Some aldermen contest that view, but the general feeling of the city has been that it is not worth the legal expenses involved or the risk of souring relations with the province to pursue the matter.

(For its five vehicles, London Omnibus Tours paid $700 in licences. If Royal Blue Lines licensed its fleet of 30 vehicles an additional $4,200 would go to the city in revenue.)

The traffic committee recommended Royal Blue Lines' request for additional Causeway parking space be declined, and that area will likely be turned over to tourist parking.

Last word on the subject from Hood: "They (Hydro) are certainly solving the problems of competition . . ."

Talks Next Week on Wharf Expansion

By AL FORREST

Standard Oil had agreed to open discussions with Victoria city officials next week on making some of the company's Inner Harbor foreshore area available for expansion of fishermen's wharf.

An agreement would enable the Victoria fishing fleet to continue to anchor here instead of moving to Sooke.

Some 300 fishing vessels are involved.

First word of the agreement to consider a lease to the city came this morning from Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which organized a joint meeting with city and company officials.

Chamber president Terry Farmer said the foreshore lease could be an 11th hour reprieve for the Victoria fishermen who were reported to be unhappy about the prospects of having to anchor at Sooke.

Some of the fishermen are on the harbor committee of the chamber.

Farmer said the fishing fleet should be retained by Victoria as a convenience to the fishermen and a tourist attraction.

In Vancouver, C. B. Macdonald, marketing vice-president for Standard Oil Co. of B.C. Ltd., confirmed that talks would open next week with Mayor Peter Pollen on the possibility of leasing the company's foreshore rights for expansion of the fishermen's wharf.

However, he stressed that discussions so far were in a preliminary stage.

He said the company is willing to sign a lease with the city if an agreement on terms could be reached.

Farmer said the Standard Oil property was the only possible area available for a Victoria fishermen's wharf large enough to handle the fleet.

The chamber had sought and failed to locate sites in Esquimalt harbor and Portage Inlet.

The chamber was excited about the prospect for wharf expansion on the Standard Oil holdings and work could begin as soon as a lease is signed.

Farmer said a key element in the expansion of the wharf was the availability of land in Colwood for future relocation of the Standard Oil tank farm over the next five to ten years.

In Vancouver, Macdonald said reports he had received on the proposed new siting of the tank farm were all unofficial. He said he would contact officials of the capital region district to get official word on what is proposed for the company.

He said the company wished to co-operate on harbor development and was looking forward to next week's discussions with Mayor Pollen.

Amateur Hockey's Structure Tested

By The Canadian Press

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's hands are tied so far as the hockey playing Howe boys are concerned, says Jack Devine.

The newly elected CAHA president said that the association is "taking under advisement" the signing earlier in the day of the two Detroit-born teen-agers by Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association.

The Howe boys — Mark, 18, and Marty, 19 — are sons of former National Hockey League great, Gordie Howe, who, at present, still holds an executive job with Detroit Red Wings.

Under a CAHA agreement with the NHL, the pros will not sign any players before their 20th birthday. Marty had one more year of eligibility and Mark, who played with the U.S. Olympic hockey team at Saporro, Japan, in 1972, still had two years left.

"Disappointed, that's all I can say," said Devine about the signings Tuesday night. He said that as recently as the junior draft at Montreal in mid-May the WHA "assured us they had no intention of signing any juniors."

He said the CAHA had on file two letters from the WHA to Joe Kryczka of Calgary, past president of the CAHA, indicating the league would not sign junior players until they became eligible for the draft.

"It was even expressed at one of the meetings we had this year with their negotiating committee."

He said that whether the letters mean anything in a court of law is "something we are taking under advisement to see what can be done."

Devine said the CAHA and WHA were in the process of preliminary talks leading to establishment of an agreement similar to one the amateur body has with the NHL.

He said the figures presented by the WHA seemed agreeable. They were to be presented to the CAHA's junior congress at Charlottetown this year before WHA president Gary Davidson advised the association that "the CAHA was too demanding."

"We hadn't demanded anything to this point," Devine said. "The figures had just been presented and we were to present them to the junior congress."

Gordon Juckes, managing director of the CAHA in Ottawa, said of the WHA letters signed by Davidson: "Obviously, they don't mean a thing."

"It's very serious and detrimental to junior hockey in Canada," he added. "We can discount any claims by Davidson and the WHA that they were professional.

"If they did it once, there is nothing to indicate they won't do it again."

George Armstrong, who coached the Howes in Toronto last season, was not available for comment. Nor was the Marlboro general manager, Frank Bonello, who is on vacation.

Joe Kryczka of Calgary, past president of the CAHA, called the WHA signings "a backward step for pro hockey."

"If the World Hockey Association continues to disrupt the minor levels, the whole structure of amateur hockey will go to pieces," he said.

"It's getting to be ridiculous." He suggested that if the pro teams were allowed to get away with signing junior players, "who is to draw the line to say who is exceptional and who isn't?"

"If clubs can sign 18-year-olds, what is to stop them from signing 17- 16- or 15-year-olds," he added. "If this continues, my recommendation is that individual clubs ... should be going to court."

In Montreal, Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said the league "can do nothing" about the signings. But at the same time he said he recalled the flak the NHL had attracted almost 10 years ago for signing young players before they had completed their junior eligibility.

Campbell said the subject of the Howe boys and the current pro-amateur agreement with the CAHA, which expires June 30, will be studied at next week's annual meeting of the NHL.

Hockey: A Day With the Blazers

VANCOUVER — I was passing by the office of the Vancouver Blazers one day this week when I heard a voice say:

"Bill, you remember me, don't you?"

It was Ed Dorohoy. He was in the lineup at the Blazers' ticket office. Laughingly I remarked: "You're in the wrong line, Ed."

"Isn't this for players,?" he replied. "We all are you know."

Sure enough, right behind Ed was Ollie, his brother. "We figured we could get a better deal the family way," he said. "Everybody else is doing it — the Howes, the Waltons ... and hell, we're not that old. Sure, we hope to play."

"What do you figure to go for, Ed?" I asked.

"With the bonus for signing, about $100,000 for a season. That's the least we'll settle for on a three-year deal."

"Quite a difference from the time you played with Lester (Patrick) in Victoria, eh Ed?"

"Yeh, Lester offered me $7,000, and me the scoring champion. But I got him. He upped the ante to $7,500 plus another five hundred on a points bonus. I could always get around old Lester."

"Who elso is here?", I surveyed the group.

"Shouldn't tell you," said Ed, "not until we get to see Phil (Watson). A lot of them want to make their own deal — that's why we lined up over here, away from the press. Phil suggested it and, until you came along, it worked. But I'll tell you something for old times sake:

'Can Make It Forever'

"See that dark-haired fellow about four back, the one with the scowl and the dark glasses. It's Rocket Richard," he whispered, "but don't tell that I told, not until he signs. He and Henri want a big package, and why not? The Rocket can score and Henri can skate, which is more than a bunch of these rookies coming up can do.

"Any others I should know?"

"Guess you've heard Ted Lindsay on the American TV games, eh? Well, he is here, and he's got a kid that's pretty good; and when he heard his old linemate Gordie Howe was going to break out in strip again, Ted thought: 'I guess I'm not as old as I thought I was and, after what I saw last winter, maybe I can sweet-talk someone into a job.'

"They want his boy, anyway; this way, if Ted doesn't make it the club at least gets a color man for TV. I wish I could talk like he does."

"Don't I know that chap over there?"

"You should," said Ed, "that's Bryan Hextall. Remember, he played for the Rangers. He's got two good boys, both pros, and Bryan has never played with them in a game either. So if Howe can do it, why can't he? Think of the publicity, the Howe Line against the Hextall Line!"

'Big Butch' and 'Little Butch'

"We figure we got a little more going for us than family forward lines though. Check that fellow at the end of the line, the one slouching behind Lynn Patrick (Oh, Lynn — he wants to try for the double too, but as an assistant GM, and let Craig do the skating. A different father and son act, you understand). But that other guy, I hope we can get him, and if we do we would have a French Connection, family style, to go with our other defensive combination. No language problem, get it!

"It's Butch Bouchard. People out here don't know Butch; and he's keeping quiet so his accent won't give him away.

"Just imagine, Big Butch and Little Butch on the same defence! Oh, the other one?

"You won't believe it, I know, and for heavens sake don't mention it when the Canucks are around.

"The Babe (that's Pratt) signed up yesterday. Tracy, his boy, set to jump from Buffalo, but the story won't break until the Babe goes to another of those hockey or sports luncheons.

"Then he can kiss the Canucks good-bye in style.

"But Ed, you're 44!"

"So what! Howe's 45 isn't he, and he never had HIS practice jersey retired by the Canadiens, did he?"

The line moved, Ed was next.

"See you in the finals," he said.

It's Official—Flyers Sign Cook, Also Stumpf, Leavins

By The Canadian Press

Pro hockey signings were the order Tuesday and while the World Hockey Association got the most ink with the Howe boys, the rival National Hockey League was more active.

As expected, the teen-age Howes came to terms with the WHA Houston Aeros, signing four-year pacts for an undetermined amount.

Mark, 18, was the Aeros' No. 1 choice in the recent WHA draft while Marty, 19, was an eight-round draft pick. Both boys, sons of Gordie Howe, played junior hockey last year with Toronto Marlboros, Canadian junior champions.

The elder Howe remained in the background through most of the signing ceremonies at Houston but admitted he is still negotiating with the WHA club for a possible playing contract.

Gordie has been in retirement since September, 1971, and has since held an executive job with Detroit Red Wings, his employers for 26 years as a player—25 in the NHL when he set most of the league scoring records.

And while the Howe family was busy in Texas, the rival league was busy signing up many of its prized rookies taken in the NHL's junior draft in mid-May.

Philadelphia Flyers were the most active, announcing the signings of their top six selections, led by No. 1 Larry Goodenough, a defenceman with London Knights of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series.

Also under contract to the Flyers in the marathon signing spree were four wingers from the Western Canada Hockey League—Brent Leavins, Swift Current Broncos; Bob Stumpf, New Westminster Royals; Mike Clarke, Calgary Centennials and Dale Cook, Victoria Cougars—and defenceman Michel Latreille of Montreal Red White and Blue of the Quebec junior circuit.

St. Louis Blues also signed their first choice in the junior draft, goalie John Davidson of the Centennials, to a multi-year contract.

Vancouver Canucks also signed six-foot-five Bob Dailey, a defenceman from Toronto Marlboros who was Montreal's first-round choice but was subsequently traded to the West Coast club. Dailey signed a "multi-year" contract but details were not disclosed.

Two Swedish players indicated Tuesday they are ready to sign with Toronto Maple Leafs. Forward Inge Hammarstrom, 25, and Boerje Salming, a 21-year-old defenceman named to the all-star team after last year's world championships at Moscow, said they have received offers for two-year contracts.

"We have thought about the offers the last two weeks," said Hammarstrom. "We are now prepared to say yes."

The two major signings, however, belonged to the WHA.

In addition to the Howes going to Houston, left winger Marc Tardif jumped Montreal Canadiens to sign a lucrative three-year pact with Los Angeles Sharks.

Although no financial terms of the contract were revealed, reports pinned the amount at $350,000 for the 23-year-old Tardif who, during the latter part of the season, was said to be unhappy with the Stanley Cup champion Canadiens.

Jacobsen Sidelined

A three-time club champion at Glen Meadows Golf Club in Sidney, Jacobsen dropped a 4-and-3 decision to D. J. Smyth of Ireland.

Homer beat fellow-Englishman Colin Searle, 3-and-2, and today will face Alan Thirwell of Britain, the loser in the final last year.

Bonallack, also topped an English countryman, Malcolm Dodds, 4 and 3.

A hole-in-one was scored by 31-year-old dental-surgeon Jim Crawford of Winston Salem, N.C., who fired an eight-iron shot on the 152-yard 14th hole while winning over Dr. Charles Mammel of Washington, D.C.

The tournament opened Monday and, as usual, Frank "One Round" Strafaci of Miami did his thing—he lost in the first round for the 23rd straight year.

Strofaci lost 3-and-2 to Thomas Culligan of San Mateo, Calif., and said:

"After 23 years playing in this championship, I'm quite familiar with the feeling of losing yet again in the first round. I'm not too disappointed this time."

Cavo Doro finished second with Freefoot third. Ksar, the 5-1 favorite, was a well-beaten fourth.

Newcombe Bows In Italian Open

(Times News Services)

Arthur Ashe, Cliff Richey and Charlie Pasarell Tuesday all cruised into the third round of the $135,000 Italian Open tennis championships in Rome.

But four other Americans and fifth-seeded Australian John Newcombe were all eliminated.

Jiri Hrebec of Czechoslovakia downed Connors 2-6, 6-2, 6-4, Manuel Orantes of Spain got past Van Dillen 6-1, 6-4, Ezio Di Matteo of Italy downed Gottfried 6-2, 6-3 and Boro Javanovic of Yugoslavia beat Stockton 7-5, 6-3.

'Double Play' by Bullen Helps Leading Seaboard

Glen Bullen, not normally a powerful hitter, had to come up with an impressive two-way display Tuesday night to help earn front-running Seaboard Construction a 3-0 shutout over Royal Oak Sporting Goods at Heywood Avenue Park.

In another Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game, first-baseman Bob Butterworth made determination go a long way in pacing Mike's Sport Shop to a 6-4 win over Labatts at Central Park.

Bullen, who had been engaged in a scoreless pitching duel with Gordie Warren, lashed out with a one-out, two-run homer in the fifth inning. Bob Lowe scored the other Seaboard run later in the same frame by tagging a single, racing to third on a wild pitch and streaking home on a catcher's error.

Butterworth, who sprained his ankle early in the game, managed to limp to the plate twice more to complete a three-for-three performance at the plate. He scored once and drove in one run.

Improved Burrards Nip Irish

Victoria Shamrocks will have to play just a fraction better tonight if they are going to snap a four-game losing streak.

Western Lacrosse Association leaders Vancouver Burrards pay their first visit of the season to Memorial Arena tonight at 8 and will be seeking their sixth straight victory.

Burrards, much improved from last year and beaten only once in eight starts this season, made it five wins in a row Tuesday night by edging the Shamrocks 10-9 in Vancouver.

Shamrocks, who have won two games at home but suffered six losses on the road, gave their best performance in an away game Tuesday night but couldn't beat brilliant young Vancouver goalkeeper Dave Evans often enough in the third period.

Evans, who replaced veteran Don Hamilton midway through the first period, with Shamrocks leading 4-2, made 26 saves, including breakaway stops on Tom Leavsseur, Frank Alexander and Nirmal Dillon in the last four minutes of the game.

Shamrocks led 5-3 after the first period but, sparked by Evans' outstanding netminding, Burrards turned it round to hold a 9-7 edge going into the final 20 minutes.

Victoria scored two of only three goals in the third period and Evans pulled off 12 saves in the 20-minute span.

Skip Chapman also had a fine game in the Victoria nets, stopping 37 shots.

Brian Thompson of the Shamrocks got one goal and four assists to lead both teams in scoring and teammates Ranjit Dillon and Ivan Thompson both had two goals and two assists.

Dave Litzenberger, who scored twice while Burrards were shorthanded, and Bob Babcock both finished with two goals and two assists to lead Vancouver.

Tonight's game will be the third meeting of the season between the clubs—Burrards hammered Shamrocks 16-3 in Vancouver early last month.

Unwarranted Criticism Levelled at Boat Basin

Conservationists appear to be barking up the wrong tree over construction plans of a marina complex at the up-Island resort community of Saratoga Beach.

Not that such concern is in itself inappropriate, but we believe that their aim is a little off the mark.

Father Charles A. E. Brandt presented a brief on behalf of the Steelhead Society of British Columbia to a recent Comox-Strathcona regional board meeting protesting proposals of Pacific Playgrounds resort to construct a test channel at the mouth of the Oyster River.

The brief warned "if this goes ahead the river will be a write-off."

True, the Oyster is threatened — as also stated in the brief — by up-stream logging and that ill-advised proposal by the Campbell River water board to divert approxiately 11 million gallons of water per day.

Basically, the proposed test channel will have nothing whatsoever to do with the Oyster River and it appears unlikely there will be any harmful affect on the estuary.

Pacific Playgrounds, a wholly-owned subsidiary of G. S. Ward Holdings Ltd., is centred around a boat basin dug on a flat beside the Oyster. Gravel from the excavation was used for road construction whithin the company's property.

George Ward, spokesman for the half dozen B.C. and Alberta businessmen who make up the company, said permission was then obtained from the navigatable waters branch of the Canadian department of transport to use the Oyster River for access to the basin.

The rub comes at low tide when the Oyster is too shallow to permit entry or exit of boats.

Another consideration involves the use of this basin as a boater's refuge during stormy weather. It would be the only safe mooring spot between Comox and Campbell River.

Hence the proposal to dig a channel, not in the Oyster inself, but parallel to the river across a strip of land separating the basin from the ocean.

"We've requested a test channel to complete a study on the environmental consequences," said Ward.

Ward said access through the Oyster would be blocked off if the test channel proves out to prevent the river from carving a new path through the basin.

The proposal also calls for construction of a breakwater about 1,500 feet long and running at right angles to the beach in a slightly southerly direction to protect the channel to the north.

Tom Bird, a biologist with the environmental protection arm of federal fisheries, became involved in the Oyster situation about one ond one-half years ago just as development of the marina began. A program of investigation was initiated at that time to study escape records and catalogue such items as bottom fauna.

Measurements of salinity, vegetation, fry quantities etc. are still being carried out at two-week intervals and a report on the study is expected sometime this fall.

"It is more of a marine environment than an estuary environment," he explained.

"There is no possibility from our point of view that any damage will be done," said Bird, who added maintenance dredging was "one of our concerns."

Another concern, voiced by regional fisheries biologist George Reid, involves the overburden removed while constructing the channel. It shouldn't be left where it can get into either the river or ocean.

"We don't think it (the proposals) will affect the river to any great degree," said Reid, who is radically opposed to any degradation of natural water supplies.

Walter Redel, director of the lands branch and responsible for approving the channel, "is not basically opposed to it."

Bob Ahrens, who as director of the parks branch is responsible for the recreational reserve which runs along the foreshore from the Oyster River south to Miracle Beach provincial park, also had no real objection.

We would suggest, however, that a bridge be built over the channel for people wishing to walk to the outlet of the river along the beach from either resorts south of Pacific Playground.

Which brings us the conclusion with a statement from Ward containing an inescapable thread of logic.

"Our resort depends on fishing and we wouldn't do anything to harm it. This is why we're asking for the test channel."

Wilbur Has a New Target

By The Associated Press

The question in the American League suddenly is not whether Wilbur Wood will win 30 games or even 40, but rather when will he win No. 14?

Wood's knuckleball failed him again Tuesday night as Baltimore Orioles rallied for four runs in the eighth inning to defeat Chicago White Sox 7-4 and hand Wood his second loss in a row since he notched both his 12th and 13th victories on May 28.

Elsewhere, Detroit Tigers downed California Angels 5-2, New York Yankees outslugged Texas Rangers 8-6, Boston Red Sox trounced Kansas City Royals 9-2 and Milwaukee Brewers edged Oakland A's 5-4.

Minnesota and Cleveland were rained out with the Twins leading 4-0 in the third inning, washing out home runs by Harmon Killebrew and Rod Carew.

In the National League, Willie Davis went 4-for-5 with a triple, double and a pair of singles to pace Los Angeles Dodgers to a 10-1 rout of the Chicago Cubs.

The Dodger victory kept them within three games of San Francisco Giants in the NL's western division after the Giants beat Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

Montreal Expos moved to within one win of a .500 record by edging Atlanta Braves 7-6 in 11 innings; Cincinnati Reds stopped New York Mets 6-5 in 10 innings; Philadelphia Phillies blanked Houston Astros 4-0, and St. Louis Cardinals defeated San Diego Padres 5-3 in other NL games.

Ron Fairley's two-out home run—his eighth of the year—carried the surprising Expos to within a half game of Pittsburgh in the Nation's eastern division.

Wood's pitching actually was more impressive than the seven runs he surrendered. He yielded a ground single to Bobby Grich in the first inning and then retired the Orioles in order until Brooks Robinson and Paul Blair hit ground singles with two out in the fifth.

In the eighth, Powell singled and pinch runner Enos Cabell was sacrificed to second. A walk to Rich Coggins and Bobby Grich's infield hit loaded the bases and designed hitter Tommy Davis singled sharply to left for the tying and lead runs.

Al Bumbry ran for Davis and broke for second. When Wood wheeled to throw to second, Grich broke for the plate and stole home standing up. Don Baylor's RBI double chased Wood and sealed the White Sox' fourth loss in a row.

"Wood did his job," said manager Chuck Tanner of the White Sox. "He made them hit it on the ground but some of them found holes."

Eddie Brinkman drove in two runs with a homer and double and reliever John Hiller of Toronto posted his 11th save of the season in the Tigers' victory over the Angels.

Brinkman snapped a 2-2 tie with a run-scoring double in the second inning and Hiller bailed winner Jim Perry out of a bases-loaded, two-out situation in the sixth when he fanned pinch hitter Winston Llenas on three pitches.

He then stopped the Angels on one hit the rest of the way as the Tigers maintained their 1½-game lead over New York in the AL East.

DARKNESS HALTS BASEBALL

Darkness forced a halt to the Tuesday night Victoria Senior Baseball League tussle between Gorge Hotel and Farmer Construction at Lambrick Park.

The game, called with the score tied 2-2 after eight innings, will be continued prior to the regularly-scheduled doubleheader on Sunday.

Russell Accepts 'New Challenge'

SEATTLE (AP) — Bill Russell promised Tuesday to try to leave behind the mental scars he has carried since his National Basketball Association days in Boston.

He vowed to make a fresh start as coach-general manager of the NBA's Seattle Supersonics.

Russell, who dominated the NBA for a decade, first as an all-star centre, then as player-coach, told the Puget Sound Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association his confrontation with racial prejudice in Boston had left him with certain ill feelings.

"When I went there, I found they had a code of ethics — one for athletes and one for black athletes," Russell said. "I am going to try to erase the scars.

"Since the Sonics have been here, there are two people the city has taken to, Walt Hazzard and Lenny Wilkens. That may not seem significant, but both these guys are black guys."

Russell said he could remember in Boston one year after the Celtics had won the NBA crown, "all they could do was complain about all the black guys" on the team.

Notice to Power Saw Fallers, Surviving Relatives and Bereaved Families

Already this year, 12 fallers killed, dozens smashed or injured for life. This matter now deserves public exposure. I propose the following to be made law and written into the present Workmen's Compensation Act.

1. All areas to be felled and bucked, must be ribboned out in quarters.
2. No more than 2 active fallers in a quarter.
3. Each set of Fallers working in a quarter shall appoint a captain. His appointment based on experience and intelligence not on seniority and education.
4. All decisions regarding falling and bucking and the amount of men in one quarter shall be final to the captain.
5. No faller to work alone under the method of spot checks twice a day.
6. All employers having more than 1 set of fallers must retain a competent Bullbucker with Industrial First Aid ticket.

The scram system of placing fallers in a small area must be outlawed. Old style drive in caulks also be outlawed.
Man has been able to travel to the moon and back, surely someone could manufacture a proper faller's helmet and eliminate the soup plate worn today.

My sincere appreciation to all loggers who stayed off the job in Gordon River area last Monday in order to settle one safety grievance.

Write to the Head Office, Workmen's Compensation Board, Vancouver, B.C., and support these points of safety. Why talk? Let's make it law.

Strong Support for Secretariat

By The Associated Press

Those who handled the last Triple Crown winner 25 years ago think Secretariat is about to match the feat, but they have expected triples before —and were wrong.

Jimmy Jones, who trained Citation in 1948, and Eddie Arcaro, who rode him, believe Secretariat should have little trouble winning Saturday's Belmont Stakes to go with his Kentucky Derby and Preakness victories.

"The further you go toward the Triple Crown, the weaker the competition gets," Arcaro said.

"There's nobody on the horizon" to beat him," Jones echoed.

Both Arcaro and Jones said there is no way to compare the two horses since so much has happened in racing during the quarter of a century that separates them.

Saturday's Belmont Stakes will be telecast on Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12 starting at 2 p.m. Post time will be approximately 2:40.

Both the former trainer and jockey predicted a Secretariat victory in the Belmont, but both said they had been fooled before.

"I thought that Canonero II was going to win it and I still think he would have if something hadn't happened to him between the Preakness and the Belmont," Arcaro said.

"And I thought Majestic Prince would win it, too."

Jones said Tim Tam would have won the crown, but he broke a sesamoid bone in the Belmont at the five-sixteenths pole.

"He was a game horse . . . he still finished second."

Neither Arcaro nor Jones could supply a reason why four horses — ending with Citation — won the crown in an eight-year span, then none for 25 years.

Perhaps, Jones speculated, it is because there are more races today with big purses and all of the top flight horses don't end up in the same races.

Jones said more horses presently are pointed for one or two legs of the Triple Crown and don't race in all three.

"I think it's been about the same from the beginning," he said by telephone from his Miami apartment.

But back to Secretariat and the one and a half mile test that stands between the Meadow Stable color-bearer and the crown.

"I said right after the Derby that he'd win the Triple Crown," Arcaro said. "I was one of those who had thought he couldn't run a mile and a quarter, but after the Derby I decided he could run two and one quarter miles if he wanted to."

Speaking from Monmouth Park in Oceanport, N.J., where he is director of racing, Jones called Secretariat "by far the best horse this year."

"I was rather impressed with him in the Preakness, but now the question is how good the other horses are — and that won't be answered until they race some more."

What did the trainer tell Arcaro on that afternoon in 1948 when he was shooting for the Belmont and the crown with Citation?

"I just said I didn't see how anybody could beat this horse unless he fell off" Jones said.

Albion Staging Six-a-Side Test

Defending champions Incogs will be among 12 teams competing in the 14th annual Albion Cricket Club's six-a-side tournament Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

Junior and Anzac elevens, as well as 10 teams from clubs in the Victoria and District Cricket Association, will take part in the knockout competition for the J. R. Mainwaring Trophy.

Each team bowls five six-ball overs in the games, which get under way at 11 a.m. and run approximately 45 minutes each.

Mainwaring, a former leading Victoria batsman, will present the trophy to the winning team after the final game, expected to start about 6:30 p.m.

Steel belted radials

45.98 165-13 Whitewall

Guaranteed 40,000 miles

a-95 R 77000. Our very best! Superbly constructed with 2 tough steel cord belts plus 2 rayon radial plies. You are assured maximum protection against punctures, cuts and other road hazards. Plus the ultimate in steering control and traction. And because tread squirm is virtually eliminated you get long, long mileage. We guarantee it!

Radial construction. What does it mean? Unlike conventional tires the body cords run straight across the tire rather than in a criss-cross pattern. 2 steel belts around the circumference of the tire ensure a stiff tread area, flexible sidewalls. Tread stays flat for minimum rolling resistance and superior handling performance.

It Wasn't Pilic's Day

PARIS (AP) — Ilie Nastase of Romania sent a stream of backhands past Yugoslavia's Nikki Pilic Tuesday and beat him 6-3, 6-3, 6-0 to win the $135,000 French open tennis championship.

Less than an hour later, a second blow hit Pilic. The International Lawn Tennis Federation announced he was suspended until June 30, which means he is banned from the Italian championships and from Wimbledon in Britain.

The suspension was first announced by the Yugoslav Tennis Federation two weeks ago because Pilic had refused to play for his country in the Davis Cup. It appeared at first that he would be banned from the French championships.

But he appealed to the ILTF, was allowed to play pending the appeal and fought through to the final.

The Nastase-Pilic final lasted 90 minutes. Nastase made it look so easy that the 10,000 fans in Roland Garros Stadium rarely got excited.

Pilic, 33, started well enough and won the first three games. Then Nastase got into his stride, and the Yugoslav lefthander managed to win only three games in the remaining 21.

Nastase, 26, went through the tournament without dropping a set and won the first-place prize money of about $15,500. Pilic received $8,800.

East Europeans now have won this title three times in four years. Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia was the champion in 1970 and 1971.

Molson Canadian. That's the beer.

High School Golf Honors To Nanaimo

In the individual competition, Jim Melford from Burnaby South blasted out of a trap and knocked in a six-foot putt on the final hole for 153, one stroke ahead of Baker.

CRICKET CUP TO MAINLAND

Vancouver Juniors won the annual inter-city cricket match for players under 19 by eight wickets to regain the trophy.

Then Larry Unrau hit an unbeaten 47 to lead Vancouver to 74 for the loss of only two wickets.

Glenlyon Shades Cricket Rivals

VANCOUVER — Victoria school Glenlyon took two out of three in a series of inter-school cricket matches against St. George's of Vancouver.

After getting St. George's all out for 81 runs, Glenlyon made 93 for six to win the senior match by four wickets.

The Vancouver school scored 109 runs and then dismissed Glenlyon for only 50 to win the under-14 match.

And Glenlyon got St. George's all out for 68 runs and then scored 70 for the loss of eight wickets to take the Grade VII match.

Cadets Happy, Players Ache

Rival squads from the Rebels Club in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hocky Association Sunday set what they claim is a world record.

Most of the players were pretty stiff Monday after playing field hockey non-stop for six hours at Esquimalt High School in a special benefit match for the Esquimalt Sea Cadets.

According to the record books, the longest field hockey game played previously was two hours and 50 minutes in England.

Endurance was the name of the game, but for the record the younger Rebels Reds beat Rebels Greys 15-14.

Vic West Trio Collects Trophy

Joan Turner, Rae Martin and Mrs. M. Speed of the Victoria West Lawn Bowling Club chalked up a 18-13 victory over the Burnside trio of Jessie Kinneard, Flora Martin and Mrs. M. Ladouceur in the "A" final of women's triples competition for the Simmons Trophy.

In the "B" final of the event at the Beacon Hill greens, Flo Carpenter, Ethel McFarlane and Mrs. E. Freeman of Lake Hill scored a 21-9 win over Oak Bay rivals Mrs. V. Bugslag, Mrs. B. Bentley and Mrs. M. Beacom.

DEFEATED LIBERAL MPs NOW ON PAYROLL

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government has officially revealed that defeated Calgary South Liberal MP Pat Mahoney has been put on the public payroll at a fee of up to $3,000 a month.

In a written reply to questions posed by Tom Cossitt (PC-Leeds) the government said Mahoney has been given a seven-month contract to provide "assistance" for the forthcoming federal-provincial conference on economic opportunities. The government said Mahoney's monthly fee is between $2,500 and $3,000.

The growing number of defeated Liberal MPs and candidates who have been found jobs by the government has created a great deal of controversy in Ottawa.

So many have been put on the public payroll that Stanley Knowles (NDP Winnipeg North Centre) tried to put a motion before the Commons urging the government present a list of all defeated Liberals who have "not been given political appointments.

Just a week ago, in written replies to other questions asked by Cossitt the government said 17 defeated MPs and candidates — all but four Liberals — are now on the public payroll.

However, while the government said this list contained all such appointments, Mahoney's name was prominently missing. Cossitt then asked the government specifically about Mahoney by name.

Mahoney, a corporation lawyer, was elected to the House in the Trudeaumania sweep of 1968. He soon gained a reputation as a hardworking and almost inexhaustable politician.

Appointed Parliamentary secretary to former Finance Minister Edgar Benson — and later appointed to the cabinet as a minister of state — Mahoney was given the job of guiding the controversial tax reform legislation through the Commons.

Although the government answered both major questions posed by Cossitt it tended to sidestep the intricate detail of the second question.

Asked Cossitt: "What were the considerations involved in making any appointment and was one of the considerations that Mahoney was a former Liberal member of Parliament and a former member of the cabinet?'

Back came the vague answer: "Consideration involved the overall suitability of the individual's professional, academic and personal qualifications in relation to the job requirement."

Ottawa Ignores Harbors

OTTAWA (CP) — Harbor facilities for small vessels on the East and West Coasts came under fire in the Commons Monday from two Conservatives.

Walter Carter St. John's West accused the government of neglecting wharves in the Atlantic province while John Reynolds Burnaby-Richmond-Delta said British Columbia fishermen used United States harbors at minimal cost because Canadian facilities are poor.

Mr. Carter asked how the public works department could justify spending less than $8 million on capital construction and maintenance in Newfoundland and more than $206 million in Ontario when the provinces' respective unemployment rates were 16.2 and 4.5 per cent.

He said the government, which plans a $36-million building for the finance department and treasury board in Ottawa, obviously has given a higher priority to buildings in the capital than to the problems of fishermen having trouble making a living.

Environment Minister Jack Davis replied that the ratepayer spends more, on a dollar-employee basis, on the fishing industry than any other.

MILLIONS SPENT

The department of regional economic expansion had spent millions on fish-processing facilities and most of the fishing boats built in the last year were eligible for 35-per-cent government subsidies.

Mr. Davis admitted "not enough effort" has been put into maintaining small-craft harbors but said the fisheries service has a $100-million budget and "a very large percentage of that is spent in the province of Newfoundland."

Mr. Reynolds said the Fraser River harbor commission is not doing its job properly; the facilities available in the southern part of the lower B.C. mainland were in poor shape.

He quoted from a letter from Edgar Birch, a Ladner fisherman, who said the commission consults nobody before it does such things as dredging shallow areas.

He said poor facilities force fishermen to berth their vessels at Washington state harbors at a cost of between $200 and $300 a year.

Len Marchand, parliamentary secretary for northern development, said department studies show all channels in the area are deep and wide enough for fishing boats.

Nude 'Shower' Ends Party For Children

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Children attending a birthday party for 10 and 11-year-olds got an unexpected surprise when they broke open a candy-filled pinata, police said today.

Capt. Clayton Briggs, head of the Tampa vice squad, said among the candy falling to the floor were a number of crumpled magazine pages showing nude men and women.

He said when the mother saw the pictures she broke open a second pinata and found similar material.

"It appears that these magazine pages were crumpled in such a manner as to be used for filling," Briggs said. "These items are imported from Mexico as far as we know."

Cameras Also Invade: MP

The concern was brought to the Commons justice committee by John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) who raised the spectre of the current British sex scandal.

He suggested to Justice Minister Otto Lang that the government's wiretapping bill should be amended to cover the camera, mentioning the case of Lord Lambton, former British air minister, who was photographed in bed with two call girls.

Lord Lambton, who quit the British government last month, was photographed by staff photographers of the News of the World, the newspaper said Sunday.

The committee was studying the bill under which wiretapping would be outlawed except in certain instances by police and except for national security. The bill, called the Protection of Privacy Act, has received second reading in the Commons.

Mr. Lang said the government is considering other ways of protecting privacy but gave no indication if legislation would follow such study.

SERIOUS OMISSION

Mr. Gilbert suggested that lack of protection against being photographed is a serious omission from such a bill.

James Jerome (L—Sudbury), committee chairman, added that it would be illegal under the bill to invade privacy with a sound camera but not with a camera that had no sound track.

Mr. Gilbert said that one committee member suggested that the bill was misnamed if it covered only wiretapping.

"You can call it Protection of Privacy Part 1, if you like," responded Mr. Lang.

The bill provides for bugging by police with the permission of the solicitor-general or a provincial attorney-general and a judge. In exceptional circumstances the solicitor-general or an attorney-general may authorize tapping which would have to be approved later by a judge before any evidence directly obtained could be used in court.

Among other concerns expressed were:

—Reg Stackhouse (PC—Toronto Scarborough East) and Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) asked about a section of the bill which would allow bugging with the consent of one party to a conversation. Mr. Stackhouse said a man could come into another's home and not realize that his conversation is being bugged.

Mr. Lang said there are several reasons why a person should be allowed to bug his own conversation; for instance collecting evidence of an attempted bribe, indecent telephone calls and harassment with threats.

Mr. Stackhouse said both parties to a conversation should give consent to bugging before it could be legal.

—Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy Royal) noted the bill provides that a person illegally bugged may seek damages. He asked how that man would know about such illegal bugging and whether police would tell him of it?

Mr. Lang said that in many cases, but not all, the man would know about it. He added if an attorney-general discovers illegal police bugging he is obliged to take action "against his own servant."

NO WHEAT SHORTAGE: LANG

OTTAWA (CP)—Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, denied Tuesday that Canada may be forced to purchase wheat from other countries to meet foreign sales commitments.

He told John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) there is "no chance at all" that domestic supplies will become depleted.

Diefenbaker said the wheat board has "statistical misinformation" and the government will be required in the next two or three months to buy wheat on the world market to meet supply commitments.

Lang said the recent removal of delivery quotas for wheat and barley indicates that record export sales are continuing for the third consecutive year.

He said the quotas were removed because some farmers have been holding back delivery of grain, fairing heavy income-tax payments for the year.

In reply to a question from Bill Knight (NDP—Assiniboi), Lang said the wheat board continues to contract for export business but in a cautious manner.

The board wanted assurances that new customers would not put an undue strain on grain transportation and storage facilities. Also a steady supply must be guaranteed to older customers.

The government has abandoned programs that discouraged high productivity when there was a wheat surplus and is moving to test the wheat growers' production capacity, he said.

Freer Trade Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The President of an association representing German industry tried Tuesday to enlist the support of Canadian manufacturers in promoting freer international trade but it appeared that his plea met with a cool reception.

Hans-Gunther Sohl, president of the Federation of German Industries, emphasized the similarities of the Canadian and German situations in his speech at the annual banquet of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Sohl represents the German counterpart of the CMA.

Earlier speakers at the CMA annual meeting pointed to the need for protection of Canadian industry and urged tough bargaining in the forthcoming round if negotiations under terms of the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs.

The two-day annual meeting of the CMA, whose 8,300 members represent about three-fourths of Canada's manufacturing capacity, concluded Tuesday.

Sohl held out a promise of German support for reductions on tariffs of agricultural products entering the European Economic Community in negotiating a new set of customs agreements among industrial nations.

One of his main concerns, he said, was that the United States dollar be supported.

CONFIDENCE NEEDED

"The restoration of confidence in the dollar is in the interest of us all."

A flight by international traders away from use of the dollar may force the Americans into adopting protectionist policies that might scuttle the GATT negotiations, he said.

In an earlier speech at the annual meeting, Alastair Gillespie, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce, said he anticipates the new round of GATT talks will begin in mid-1974. Gillespie told an appreciative CMA audience that the government intends to consult businessmen before entering the negotiations and plans to appoint an advisory committee on tariffs.

Several Years Needed For 'Masses of Bloom'

You don't get instant "masses of bloom" from newly put in plants, even though they are known to flower freely for several weeks.

It takes two or three years to get this effect, or it takes a group of three or five of the same kind planted a foot or so apart. With these, you could look forward to a good display the year following planting.

First for sunshine, the quite ordinary Doronicum caucasicum (Leopard's-bane). Hairy leaves on strong stems a foot or more high topped with sunny yellow daisies nearly two inches across; the plants have a small tuberous rootstock, are not fussy as to soil so long as it is not soggy all winter. Doronicums last well as cut flowers too.

For a more shaded spot something blue, Tradescantia virginiana (Spiderwort). This has quiet charm because of its color and because it likes dappled sun and shade.

Once you see the quaint, three-petalled flowers with a narrow green leaf jutting off at right angles below the cluster of buds, you cannot forget it. The blue is set off by the gold of the stamens.

Tradescantia looks like a moisture-loving plant with its thick stems and narrow grassy leaves clasping the stems at intervals. It does like moisture, a humus filled soil suiting it best. There is an equally charming white variety. Plants grow no more than 15 inches.

For an area where they have space for increase, introduce a few plants of a rich color form of Thalictrum aquilegifolium, to five or six feet. Foliage is perfectly described by the specific name — aquilegia, foliage or leaves. They spread three feet across the plant. Seedlings vary from grey-white to a fine rosy lavender, so be sure of what you get.

Useful for a sunny spot is the hardy Blue Geranium, for when its veined large blue flowers are finished, the roundish leaves go on growing to six or eight inches across, beginning in August to color brilliantly for the fall months.

This is the real, honest geranium, having every right to the name. It is not what we all call "geranium," the plant grown in pots and put outdoors only in summer.

Because of this mix-up of names by gardeners in the past if for no other reason, grow the true geranium. You will like it, and there's no doubt it will add a little prestige to your gardening.

Aquilegias (or Columbines) in the long spurred hybrids add delicacy of flower form and of foliage to shaded areas.

The danger is from planting too many. You need only one or two so that you can enjoy their loveliness uncluttered by more of the same kind.

The compact little orange flowered Geum Borisii blooms for weeks in May and June if the old flowers are nipped off.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, which came up in the Spingold Knockout Team-of-Four Championship event played during the Summer Nationals of 1972, the bidding provided the key to the winning line of play.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

♡ K J
♢ A K 7 4

WEST
♠ J 10 8
♡ A 5 3 2
♣ A Q 5

EAST
♡ Q 10 8 7 6
♢ 5 3
♣ K J 10 9 7 6

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 7 5 4
♡ 9 4
♢ Q J 10 8
♣ 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

The above was the bidding sequence when the deal was played originally. Internationalist Jimmy Cayne, of New York, was sitting South. West was Tobias Stone, also of New York.

After winning the opening lead with his club ace, Stone promptly led the deuce of hearts. Cayne now went into a huddle with himself for about a minute, trying to figure out whether to play dummy's king or jack. He finally concluded that East, for his five-club bid, figured to have the ace of hearts. So he put up dummy's jack. East won the trick with his queen, and made haste to return a heart. West's ace now took the setting trick.

When the deal was replayed with Danny Rotman of Chicago sitting South, and Vic Mitchell of New York occupying the West seat, this was the bidding sequence that developed:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dbl.	Redbl.	2 ♣
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

As his counterpart in the West seat had done when the deal was played originally, Mitchell opened the ace of clubs, and, at trick two, shifted to a low heart. Rotman had no problem; he put up dummy's king, which won the trick. Thus he fulfilled his contract, losing a club and a heart.

From Rotman's point of view, West almost surely was the possessor of the heart ace. West had doubled originally, and his lead of the club ace denied possession of the king (with an A-K-x combination, he would have opened the king). And without the ace of hearts, West would not have had even the semblance of a take-out double. So declarer correctly assumed that West was underleading his ace of hearts.

FUN WITH FIGURES

"What a mess!" exclaimed Susan, looking down at the litter of books on the floor. "There must be around four hundred there."

Mike turned with a thick tome in his hand. "Not that many, but putting them into sets is a problem," he told her. "For all in eights I'm one short, and the same for fives. But in sevens I'm one over."

How many books?

London Gallery Displays Art Of Victorian

Born in the interior of B.C., Gibbs spent his boyhood years on the Prairies and his paintings portray the broad, flat fields, the derelict buildings and the rural people of the Western plains.

MAIL GOES THROUGH —BUT ON LESS GAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. postal service says it will follow the advice of some leading gasoline suppliers by instructing its drivers to drive at speeds less than 50 miles an hour, avoid jack rabbit starts, keep engines properly tuned and cut their engines when making pick-ups and deliveries.

Frank Sommerkamp, assistant postmaster-general for delivery services, said the actions would save gasoline. He said a reduction of 1 per cent in the amount of gasoline used by postal service vehicles would cut annual fuel consumption by 857,018 gallons for the service's fleet of 100,000 vehicles.

Cultural Cat Meows Again

By JEANNETTE SMYTH

Meow?

Yes, you distinctly heard a meow. (The Theatre of The Deaf is as much for hearing as deaf audiences. And apparently for cats as well.) It's Mosby again, the cultural cat, the gray ghost of the Kennedy Centre, who's been living wild in an unfinished theatre above the Eisenhower Theatre for well nigh on two years. Lately he's taken to dropping in during performances.

He recently discovered a hole in the floor of his own theatre which opened up new vistas. To wit, a three-foot crawl space in the ceiling of the Eisenhower Theatre.

"He usually picks the most quiet spot in the play," says Edward Schessler, building management director and cat caretaker. "Then he'll try to sing something.

"He's a ham."

Schessler inherited the job of feeding Mosby after the departure of the construction company secretary, Jean Morse, who found Mosby starving in 1971. Mrs. Roger Stevens, wife of the centre's board chairman, and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, national council member of The Friends of the Kennedy Centre, are buying Mosby's "high protein" cat food and kitty litter.

"He has the run of that ceiling in the Eisenhower Theatre," Schessler explains, "though holes in the floor for future piping." According to Jean Morse, Mosby was brought to the centre by construction workers to scare away bothersome pigeons. When Mosby started eating their lunches they chased him off and he went to live in the threatre — still unfinished for lack of funds.

He is not trapped anywhere as was first thought. "He also has the run of the atrium and the north gallery upstairs," Schessler says. "He can walk all around up there. He's made appearances all the way over at the restaurant."

Nobody can get near him ("he's as wild as the Dickens") and all efforts to catch Mosby have failed. Schessler is about ready to give up his latest cat-trapping project. For the past two months Mosby has repeatedly eluded a baited Washington Humane Society trap.

"He's smarter than I am," Schessler says. "I can spring that trap with a piece of paper — it's very sensitive. But he goes in there, eats his food and just clean gets out. He never gets caught.

"What I'd like to do is bring him down to my office and tame him."

Mrs. Carusi, who thinks Mosby is "sensation," says "obviously we want to get the cat out because the noise upsets people."

"Everybody wants to keep him around," Schessler says. "They call him the 'Eisenhower cat.' He's a good luck omen, the way these theatrical people believe."

Floating Opium

SAIGON (Reuter) — A South Vietnamese Navy patrol boat picked up nearly a ton of opium floating in sealed containers in the Gulf of Siam Saturday. A government spokesman said Sunday the ship was on a regular patrol near the southern tip of South Vietnam when it spotted more than 100 bags and boxes floating offshore.

Egg War Ceasefire Sought by Stupich

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich will meet representatives of the National Egg Council on Marketing Thursday to try to negotiate an end to the egg war.

That war began last month when the B.C. Egg Marketing Board seized 55,000 Manitoba eggs imported into the province by a Trail wholesaler.

Stupich says he hopes the issue can be settled by agreement on a national egg scheme. Nothing will be done, however, he said, until after Thursday's meeting.

Like meat and poultry producers, egg producers are faced with soaring feed costs which control a major part of their budget.

Last fall, Christison said, he paid $74 a ton for feed. Last week he paid $118 a ton.

The cost of replacing his stock is rising at an equal rate, he said, since high feed costs means raising chickens is more expensive.

A pullet that cost $1.50 last year costs $2.05 this year.

Feed costs are higher in B.C. than Manitoba, Christison said, because B.C. suppliers must buy grains through the Wheat Board at higher prices than are available on the Prairies.

Also there are two new demands on feed supplies with other countries seeking more protein foods and consumers placing an increased demand on soybean producers.

"The consumer can afford to pay more for soybean meal," Christison said, and suppliers in the United States are having problems with their crops this year.

Another local egg producer said retail egg prices are 10 cents higher than they've ever been before and there is litle chance of prices going down again unless the feed picture changes.

Wedding Party Boat Capsizes

BEIRUT (UPI) — A boat taking villagers across the river Tigris in Iraq to a wedding party capsized in midstream today, the Iraq news agency reported.

The agency said 20 persons, mostly women and children, were drowned and 10 passengers survived.

Date Conflict Resolved

Conflict of dates between the Victoria Symphony's summer festival series and UVic's department of music chamber concert series, has been resolved.

Changes by the music department from Wednesdays and Fridays to Tuesdays and Thursdays, will permit players who wish to do so, to participate in both series.

The UVic series will open July 3, with a repeat of the all-Mozart program, July 5.

All the concerts with the exception of the last four will be weekly pairs.

A precise schedule of the Victoria Symphony summer season has not yet been finalized by Maestro Laszlo Gati, but the outdoor concerts will take place Wednesdays and Fridays.

SHIP POSTS BOND, SAILS FOR EAST

VANCOUVER (CP) — Owners of the Greek freighter Megalopolis, arrested in May after it knocked over Vancouver's only container crane, have posted a $500,000 bond and the ship has sailed for Eastern Canada.

The ship, which left empty, is scheduled to load grain at an eastern port. The National Harbor Board and Empire Stevedoring, operators of the crane, now will proceed with joint action to recover damages and business losses from the owners.

Fire Hits Crime Lab

VANCOUVER (CP)— A blaze Tuesday destroyed numerous exhibits and caused heavy damage to the Vancouver Police Department crime laboratory. Police are investigating the cause of the fire.

No Time Off to Vote, Firm Fined $250

BURNABY (CP) — Canadian Freightways Ltd., of Calgary, was found guilty and fined $250 in court here Tuesday, for deducting wages from employees for time taken to vote in the last provincial election.

The charge was laid on an information sworn by Theodore Robert More, of Vancouver, a truck driver employed by the company and a shop steward of Local 31 of the Teamsters' Joint Council.

He said he is one of nine employees from whom deductions were made because they took time off on election day to vote. The British Columbia Elections Act provides that employers shall allow four hours for employees to vote.

The company said its federal labor bargaining certification and federal jurisdiction over its rate structure exempt it from control of provincial legislation.

Band Names New Chief

Leonard said he will launch a strong fight against incorporation of reserve lands in the city of Kamloops.

The band has been wracked by controversy since Gottfriedson disputed the December election of Norman LaRue.

A federal inquiry invalidated the results of the election because some of the voters were not residents of the reserve at the time of the vote.

Leonard, who won by a 50-43 margin, said he will not accept the band's account books from the Indian Affairs officer until they are checked by an independent chartered accountant.

$700,000 Conversion

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council voted Tuesday to spend nearly $700,000 to convert the old city museum at Hastings and Main into a health and social services centre.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dick Tighe, president of Local 61 of the Distillery Workers International Union in Walkerville, Ont., said in a telephone interview Tuesday that his local has voted to leave the international because of the treatment local union members have received in Vancouver. Tighe said his local's 800 members — the largest DWU local in Canada — voted 85 per cent in favor of leaving the international. Local 69 of the DWU has been on strike against Seagrams here for 13 weeks and has been refused strike pay by the international.

NELSON (CP) — A coroner's jury here has recommended emphasis of safety procedures in industrial areas where forklifts are used. The recommendation followed a ruling of accidental death made at an inquest into the death of Gary Bratherton, 30, of Nelson, who was killed May 1 when a forklift backed over him.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dagmar Durnett, 28, and Deborah Murdie, 20, both of Vancouver, were each fined $300 and sentenced to 30 days after convicted of possessing hashish, marijuana and MDA for the purpose of trafficking.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking upholsterer's international union members have started picketing Lower Mainland mattress retailers who continue to sell or promote Sealy and Restmore products.

Youth, 17, Cleared In Killing

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Supreme Court jury here today acquitted Peter Campbell, 17, of Burnaby, of non-capital murder.

Campbell was charged after the bloodied body of Lillian Farrell was found Dec. 29, 1971 in a parking lot beside a pancake house in Burnaby. The 21-year-old woman had been raped and beaten in the face.

Defence counsel Ken Young said Tuesday in his summation the crown's case was built on 12 pieces of circumstantial evidence—including Miss Farrell's change purse and wallet being found in Campbell's possession.

However Young said this only proves that Campbell was at worst a thief. The counsel said the youth could have found or stolen the wallet and change purse Dec. 28 while in a Vancouver restaurant where the dead woman worked.

The jury returned its acquittal shortly before 3 a.m.

Double Ring Dessert Mold

Another recipe from our salad files — this time a dessert. Spectacular in appearance (with the double-ring effect), sensational in taste. On summer days, a cool refreshing dessert, like this one, makes for change of pace.

1 (19-ounce) can crushed pineapple
2 (3-ounce) packages lemon jelly powder
1½ cups boiling water
2 pints vanilla ice cream
3 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup toasted chopped almonds

Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Dissolve jelly powder in 1½ cups boiling water. Spoon in ice cream and stir until melted. Add reserved pineapple juice and lemon juice. Chill until softly set. Fold in pineapple and nuts. Turn into two 4-cup ring moulds which have been rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm. Unmold. Cut a section (about ⅓) from one ring. Place opening inside the other and line up cut ring piece to give entwined effect. Makes 12 servings.

June is traditionally "Dairy Month" although of course we enjoy these fine foods all year 'round. Woodward's dairy case is always filled with a wide choice of wholesome foods that can add real variety to summer menus. Look for especially good buys in Woodward's dairy case this month.

NOT ALL hereditary quirks are genetic tragedies. Three-year-old Todd Thorpe of Mendham, N.J., started violin lessons when he was two and gave his first concert before the year was out. Somehow, he owes it all to a long-dead great-grandparent—most of whom passed on nothing much more notable than a mole or crooked tooth.

Modern Living Prods Those Haywire Genes

A baby's total physical and mental person depends a great deal on who your great-great grandfather was, radiation, food additives you have consumed and even the kind of pills your mother and father took. This is the second of four articles.

By ANA HONIG

A child born defective today may be the victim of a gene that went haywire in a long-dead ancestor. He is prey to a mutation, a mistake in the DNA that transmits heredity from generation to generation.

Mutations may be as trivial as a mole or a crooked tooth. Or they may cause frightful deformity, disease or death. Nearly all are harmful.

Pool Growing

And geneticists agree that the human pool of mutations is growing, engulfing ever-widening circles of new individuals.

What causes a mutation? Radiation, for sure. And perhaps some drugs and chemicals that abound in modern living.

Man today is exposed to more radiation that his forebears — more X-ray diagnosis, more radiation therapy, more radar, more atomic energy. Add to that an unending background radiation from cosmic rays and substances in the earth.

It is estimated that an accumulated radiation dosage of 45 to 100 "rads" (a unit of absorbed radiation) in the first 30 years of life will double the number of mutations. A single dose of 15 to 30 rads may produce the same genetic damage as the 45-to-100 rad accumulation.

Two Sources

How much radiation do we get now? Scientists guess that, in the first 30 years, an individual gets about 4.3 rads from natural sources and another three rads from medical sources such as X-rays.

And, according to a recent report by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, radiation exposure from all sources is expected to grow.

Mass X-ray screening — the kind that sent mobil units into everyone's neighborhood in drives to eradicate tuberculosis in the lastquarter-century — are now in disfavor in the U.S.

But mass X-raying is still evident elsewhere. In the Geneva canton in Switzerland, for instance, all teachers, hospital workers and college students must undergo annual X-ray checks. Last year, 20 per cent of the canton's 300,000 population had such examinations.

Dr. D. Klein, professor of human genetics at the University of Geneva, decrying such X-ray bombardment, insists "there is no way of telling what level of exposure is below the threshold of danger to human beings."

Drugs and the chemicals used as food additives are suspect as mutagens, too.

John G. Fuller, in a new book "200,000,000 Guinea Pigs" (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, N.Y., warns: "If the new and unknown by-products of drugs, food additives, and environmental hazards contain as many mutants as suspected, the accelerated mutation rate becomes an alarming threat."

The danger is acute, Fuller says. "The loophole in the law that permits the use of food additives that are capable of causing birth defects and gene damage seriously threatens the future of the country."

He points to chemicals such as sodium bisulphite — a preservative in dried fruits such as prunes and raisins — as an example of a mutagen hazard.

Additives Feared

"Some scientists have expressed the fear that the largely untested mutagenic qualities of food additives may be even a greater risk than that of cancer," Fuller says.

The genetic study section of the U.S. National Institute of Health has echoed this sort of thinking:

"There is reason to fear that some chemicals may constitute as important a risk as radiation, possibly a more serious one," one report says.

"Although knowledge of chemical mutagenesis in man is much less certain than that of radiation, a number of chemicals — some with widespread use—are known to induce genetic damage in some organisms. To consider only radiation hazards is to ignore what may be the submerged part of the iceberg."

The idea that drugs and chemicals may cause mutations has been around since 1945 when it was found that nitrogen mustard and nitrogen gas mutate fruit flies.

But a more pathetic mutagenic possibility appeared recently when Dr. Salvador Armendares and colleagues at the Institue Mexicane del Seguro Social in Mexico reported chromosome defects in starving children.

They found chromosome abnormalties six times as often in undernourished children — and the abnormality perisited in most cases, even after the youngsters attained normal weight.

No one can pinpoint when a mutation occurs. Yet it is fairly certain that a child born with a disorder caused by a defective dominant gene is the victim of a new mutation, perhaps in his father's sperm or mother's egg cells.

New Mutations

About 30 per cent of hemophilia cases and 15 per cent of Marfan's syndrome cases result from such new mutations.

When a recessive gene is the culprit, it is almost impossible to determine whether a new mutation is involved or whether the child is merely reaping a tragic legacy established by an ancestor long ago.

Sometimes a genetic weakness is involved — a susceptibility to disaster that remains dormant unless and until it is activated by a virus, drug or chemical, or by radiation.

Such substances, capable of causing deformity, are called teratogens. And they are especially dangerous in the first third of pregnancy when a child's body organs are being formed.

The thalidemide horror story of the 1960s points up how crucial timing is: Women who took thalidemide 35 days after their last menstrual cycle produced babies without ears. At 39 to 41 days, babies without arms or with severe arm malformations. At 41 to 44 days, babies without legs or with severe leg malformations.

Normal Results

Dr. Virginia Agar, world-famed Pediatrician and vice-president for medical affairs of The National Foundation—March of Dimes, has emphasized that the blame for birth defects is dual in many cases.

"The only reasonable conclusion researchers can draw is that the abnormalities result from the interaction of at least two factors — a teratogen plus some kind of inherited susceptibility or genetic difference."

There are, she said, "very few teratogens which cause birth defects by themselves, even when an inborn infant is exposed to them early in prenatal life."

"It is much more likely that most teratogens cause damage only when they act on the cells of an unborn infant whose unique complement of genes makes him particularly cause a variety of birth desusceptible to the teratogen.

"The same teratogen can fects, depending on this genetic sensitivity and the time during prenatal life it affects the unborn child. The earlier in pregnancy the exposure occurs, the more severe the defect will probably be and the more likely it is to be fatal."

The North American epidemic of rubella (German measles) in the mid-60s gives indication of how a teratogen — and the rubella virus, in this case — may damage some unborn babies and leave others unharmed.

Other Faults

Some 30,000 severly damaged infants were left in the wake of this epidemic. Yet many others were born healthy, even when the mothers were infected with the virus early in pregnancy. Obviously, more than a tetatrogen was at fault.

To make this point more graphic, there is a study of 19 familes, all of which had a child who was deaf because of prenatal rubella. In 13 of the families, at least one parent had hereditary hearing abnormalities.

Unenlightened Moralizing Is Fruitless

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Counsellors should turn people on to life and avoid "fruitless moralizing based on unenlightened religion," Rev. Howard J. Clinebell said Monday.

Clinebell, a psychotherapist and teacher of pastoral counselling at the School of Theology, Claremont, Calif., told participants in a three-day seminar in counselling at the University of Victoria that counsellors should act as "enliveners."

He said counsellors must realize that people are born with a tremendous capacity for growth, but 70 per cent of their potential is never used.

"The aim of life is to be fully born, to come alive to the realities of life," Clinebell said.

He said counsellors must help people release potential that has been damned up behind old guilts and wrong kinds of learning experiences.

Clinebell says counselling techniques are shifting from the pathelogical approach, which concentrated on what was wrong, to a growth approach which stresses what is right.

"The old medical model is obsolete for counsellors because it focussed on what was wrong, assigned a label and prescribed treatment," Clinebell said.

He believes it is better to look at what is right and help the person use his strengths to achieve future goals.

Clinebell explained that a client suffers a great deal of "ego loss" when he admits the need for counselling. Helping the client see what is right in his life kindles hope while the old medical method extinguished hope.

Clinebell said that in marriage counselling "it is absolutely essential" to ask clients what they still like about each other.

"If they didn't still like each other they wouldn't come for counselling. They would go to the divorce court."

He thinks professionals should seek out people who have the potential to become such lay counsellors.

Clinebell pointed out that this approach to counselling follows the example of Jesus "who looked at a smelly fisherman called Simon "and saw in him the potential leader of a new faith.

He said that if counselling was available before troubles built up to crisis proportions "we could close down the mental hospitals and prisons."

Clinebell said that the world population will have doubled by the year 2,000 and "the more we live in a crowded society the more we need skill in human relations."

He stressed the importance of turning young people on to communication skills early in life so they don't have the problems of past generations who were "programmed all the wrong way."

Clinebell said counsellors need to make allowances for "a lot of people who have had bad experiences with repressive religions."

As an example, he described clients in therapy who asked for group discussion of guilt, grief, and ideas of heaven and hell.

Counsellors need to realize that spiritual hangups are not the province of the church alone, Clinebell said.

Helping people achieve spiritual growth often means helping them recover from "the maloractice of religion in childhood," he said.

Old Road Into Langley Also Travels Into Past

elizabeth forbes

Driving back to the coast on Monday, after five days in the south Okanagan, we left the freeway at the Aldergrove turn-off, especially to renew acquaintence with the old road into Langley.

On an early June day, with the sun warm over the land, it was a happy thought.

Buttercups with stems a foot long dotted the green fields along the way. Cows grazed and sheep nibbled in those fields. Early haying was in full swing. A sweet smell of alfalfa was heavy in the air.

The one who was driving slowed the car to a reasonable speed and as we meandered along, we started to reminisce.

Actually, it was the buttercups that did it. All four in the car were old enough to remember that, as youngsters, we would hold those flowers under someone's chin and if the yellow color was reflected on the skin to assure that "someone," he or she liked butter.

"That was a very long time ago," our driver reminded us. "I doubt if any youngster plays the butter game now. It would be too simple a pastime."

In those days, she remembered, there were more fields in which city children could play "and they were thick not only with buttercups but also with daisies."

That brought on another nostalgic memory of a time when small girls would sit for hours making daisy chains.

A borrowed pin from mother's sewing basket was the only tool needed. That pin was used to make a slit in the stem of a daisy. A second daisy was slipped through the opening and, in turn, had a slit made in its stem.

This operation was repeated until chains were a good length. Then those little girls of long ago would decorate themselves with necklets, bracelets and head bands, until they actually looked like walking daisies.

Did we remember making dandelion curls, the quiet one in the back seat questioned.

A combined shout went up as all four of us recalled pulling hollow dandelion stems back into four sections. After that was done to our satisfaction, we would slide those stems in and out of our mouths, until, under the influence of saliva, the sections started to curl.

A certain artisty went into the styling of those curls. Some were long and dangling, others tight and hard. It all depended on the will of the maker and her like or dislike of the pungent dandelion taste that came with the succulent stems.

On the last turn before we descended the hill into Langley, there was a field stained sunset-red with sorrel. That surfaced another memory.

"Remember how we used to chew on a stem of sorrel," our driver asked.

A voice from the back seat answered "Mmmmm, it was good! It had a vinegary taste that always made you want more."

"Probably full of vitamin C," oame back the driver who retired awhile back from active nursing.

The one sitting beside her who until then, had listened but said little, now came out with "I loved to pick a handful of sorrel, lie flat on my back in a grassy field, chew on the stems, look up at the sky and in my imagination, create pictures from the cloud formations."

By then we were through the town of Langley, where new houses and apartment buildings are springing up like mushrooms, and were on our way to Cloverdale.

We stopped reminscing. Came back to the present. Speeded up and headed for the ferry and home.

Noted Along the Way. Signs on the doors of a number of coffee shops and restaurants between Princeton and Kelowna (even at bus stations) saying "shirts and shoes compulsory here."

Many automobile licences from other provinces in Canada and even Alaska, but only a handful from the rest of the United States. Which set us wondering if the gasoline situation over there is curtailing travel plans.

With Summer Sun's Warmth Salad Can Be a Full Meal

By HILDA BEASTALL

With ideas ready for instant action, a spell of extra warm weather should not send you, the homemaker, into a frantic search for suitable meals for the family. Preparing meals for one person is just as important. It is my hope that the ideas given in these columns meet the needs of the live-aloners as much as of families.

Salads mean summer to some people, though for many they appear in some form on the daily table.

A salad in up-to-date terms may use cheese, eggs, meat or fish as the main ingredients. These are the protein foods. Fruits and vegetables add a variety of vitamins; so do rice, macaroni and beans though these are high in carbohydrates too and heat-producing.

With such an array of good food to choose from, most homemakers, whether they are male or female, will make up a sustaining yet refreshing meal suited to a hot day.

Salads need a moisturizer or blender to make them acceptable to non-devotees. Not a rich mayonnaise or highly seasoned salad dressing, but a bland smooth sauce which blends but does not mask the flavors of the other ingredients.

Many people like sour cream which certainly is delicious for a dressing; less rich and particularly useful as a hot weather food, is yogurt.

To make any kind of salad, choose a minimum of three main ingredients. If you use too many odds and ends the salad will lose its character. Better to use one group of three for a lunch salad, another group for supper, thus creating two different taste experiences. Just as important, the two salds will appear different.

Eye appeal rates higher as temperatures rise, for family temperaments tend to mount with the thermometer.

Adults who like salads all year round, will make up their own at the table, taking what they like from serving dishes, but the reluctant salad-eater needs to have everything prepared for him (it is usually though not always, a "him") in a bowl.

Cut or chop the green vegetables, or the fruits, at the last possible moment before serving. Mix in the yogurt, or the oil dressing if you prefer this, so that all particles are lightly coated to preserve freshness. Keep the bowl of salad, covered, in a cool place for the few minutes it must wait to be served. Many people do not like ice-cold salads, buth they need to be fresh.

Children eat salads if not too many things are mixed. They like to identify what they eat, but need also to have the example of other people eating with evident enjoyment.

A big fruit salad combined with cooked brown rice and yogurt, eaten with home made cookies as given last week, makes a satisfying lunch to last for an afternoon of work, either at school, home, office or in the garden.

Salads in their versatile garb, are good food. They are economical, but they need care in preparation as any other home-made meals, though they take less time and effort than multi-course meals.

Lady With the Palms Has Money to Burn

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a serviceman for 16 years. We have two children, 13 and 9. Our marriage has been miserable. I am easy-going, and he is very temperamental. He was away for 13 months, and I wanted to write and tell him we were finished because I had lost all love and desire for him. That's when I went to this lady who reads palms.

The lady told me that money is power, and power is the devil's curse, and if I had any money I would have to sacrifice it to drive the evil spirits from my body.

I told her all I had was $600 in cash and $2,800 in bonds. She told me to bring her the cash so she could take it to church and burn it as a sacrifice, then I would be free of the devil's curse.

I did as she asked, and I know it sounds weird, but like a miracle I started feeling love and desire for my husband again, even though we were separated. I wrote him love letters every day. The palm reader told me if I mentioned the miracle to my husband the spell would be broken.

I was very happy. Then this woman called and told me she had a message from God, who said if I wanted the spell to last after my husband got home I would have to cash in my bonds and sacrifice them, too, so I obeyed her.

My husband is coming home soon, and I don't know what to tell him about our savings and the bonds. I'm afraid he will kill me. Please help me. — Worried.

DEAR WORRIED: Your story should be told to the police.

DEAR ABBY: As soon as Tom and I became engaged, he started the "Why wait?" line, so we became intimate, although I was a virgin until then. Now I find that he has told all his friends, and I feel betrayed.

I am not sure I want to spend the rest of my life with someone that immature. Abby, if a boy really loves a girl and respects her, would he tell something like that? — Young Square.

DEAR YOUNG: No. And I think you are wise to question his love. Don't marry a "boy" — marry a man.

DEAR ABBY: I am having a fight with my girl friend. We wanted to go dutch treat to a drive-in movie and I was a little low on money, so I suggested that she drive my car and I would ride in the trunk of the car.

She agreed, took the wheel, and drove to the drive-in. When we got there she refused to let me out. I pounded and pounded but she wouldn't let me out. I finally gave up and had to stay cramped up in the trunk while she watched the movie. After the movie she drove herself home and then she let me out.

She said she wanted to teach me a lesson because what I wanted to do was not only dishonest it was stingy, too. I say the theatres charge all they can get, which is way too much, and anybody who can get in for free deserves to.

Was she right, or was I? — Cramped

DEAR CRAMPED: She was. Your chintzy stunt backfired. But watch that girl friend. She's a tough teacher!

DEAR ABBY: Often people write to you for information which they can easily get by simply calling their public library (such as the recent inquiry about the origin of the American Indian). Most libraries are happy to serve the public with ready reference material by phone. Libraries are not just for "bookworms" — they are the storehouse of mankind's accumulated knowledge, historical as well as current.

Librarians are there to arrange this material in some logical manner, and guide people in their search for it. They can supply facts concerning the World Series, instructions on repairing a car, material for a term paper, a directory of addresses, back issues of a magazine.

Please urge people to use their public libraries. We have no budget to advertise the many services we offer. Will you give us a small plug, Abby? — Former Librarian.

DEAR FORMER: You've helped me for years. This is the least I can do for you. I hope this item doesn't swamp you.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thursday, June 7

BY SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Follow orders from one who is an expert. Don't attempt to be your own doctor of lawyer. You may feel confined. This is but temporary. Do your best to be co-operative. Then others will strive to aid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): One who cares may exhibit short fuse where temper is concerned. Be mature, understanding. Temporary hurt actually may be for your ultimate benefit. Realize it and respond accordingly. Don't compound error.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What appears opposition is actually a "paper tiger." Means don't concern yourself over legal loophole. You will be protected. Insist on factual information. Aries will share valuable experience.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Strive to be independent, not arrogant. One who encourages you has more than a passing interest. Know it and don't play games with emotions. You could be on brink of meaningful relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Member of opposite sex may not be telling all. Know it and maintain sense of balance. You don't own any individual. Your intuition is on target. Heed inner voice. Aquarian may play key role. Money question should be resolved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid trying to be everywhere at once. Be versatile without becoming confused. Sagittarius, Gemini persons could play prominent roles. Don't give up something for nothing. Check bill of sale. Property could be worth more than imagined.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasize steadiness, security. Promote image of solidarity. Many look to you now as example — you can provide inspiration and instill courage. What appears mysterious need not be frightening. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio are in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Harmonize dealings with Libra. Don't be satisfied merely that something happened. Find out why it occurred. Put to use your natural abilities as a detective. Threat made to associate should not be ignored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent is on how you relate to family. You need moral support from those who know you. Seeking illusion now would be costly. Transform daydreams into working realities. Do this by bringing forth creative resources.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain valid hint from Scorpio message. Don't fear the unknown. What seems like a setback could end by being very funny. Be selective. Refine techniques. Get rid of methods which are wasteful. Pisces could figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dig deep for information, especially where possible investments are concerned. Someone is not telling you the complete story. It may be fun to be fooled, but not to be deceived. Check resources. Take inventory.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid self-deception. First offer may not be the best to accept. Wait and observe. See in light of actuality. One who makes many promises could lack capital. Know it and proceed with caution. Judgement may be slightly off base.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are spiritual, at times introspective. You often work best alone, although fond of people. You draw to you many born under Pisces and Virgo. Family affairs dominate this year, especially in September. But your "money month" will occur in November. You are a creative person, not easy to understand but fascinating.

'Fetoscope' Soon in Use

As I have written here before, much can be learned about a fetus in the mother's womb with the new method of amniocentesis. In this procedure a long hollow needle is inserted through the mother's abdominal wall in order to take a sample of the amniotic fluid that surrounds the baby in the womb. Studying that, and then studying the baby's cells, some of which are shed by the fetus, the doctor can see the chromosomes (the 46 tiny rods in every body cell which carry on them the genes which determine what the child will be like). The doctor can study the chemistry of the cell as well, thereby learning much about the developing infant.

This method has been helpful in telling the expeetant mother whether her child is free of certain defects, or whether it is a girl or boy.

This can be important when there is a chance that the child will have hemophilia, the disease in which the blood lacks a certain factor that causes it to clot properly, and which almost always attacks a boy.

Now, scientists are developing a new instrument, called the Fetoscope, that within two years may enable physicians to look at a baby in its mother's uterus.

Michael M. Kaback, MD of UCLA is collaborating with engineers of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, and at present, is using pregnant sheep until he can be sure the device will be safe for humans.

Dr. Kaback says that he can see the legs, the head, and the genitals of the fetal lambs very clearly.

MATCHMAKER ARRIVES

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A global matchmaker searching for "mail order brides" willing to pay for the chance to find an Australian husband has arrived in the United States.

Dr. John Sanders, a Sydney psychologist armed with files on 1,000 potential bridegrooms, was immediately inundated with phone calls from women wanting to emigrate down under.

Sanders, who said he had already arranged 2,000 marriages between Australian men and European women, said North America was a good hunting ground because there are 15 million more single women than men, while in Australia there are 163,628 more males of marriageable age than women.

"All of this could make for a marvelous marriage of statistics," said Sanders.

Diary of a Househusband

By HANK BURCHARD

The policy of holding down only my end of the wage-price seesaw has forced the person with whom I am lawfully connected to return to work so we may indulge in such extras as milk and bread.

Since I work at night, during the daylight hours I have become subspecies, the househusband. Whether it is a matter of economics or of "consciousness-raising" (or of conscience appeasing), there are so many of us househusbands now that all the sociological journals are studying the phenomenon and even the newspapers have found out about it.

But nowhere in this flood of commentary is there to be found any useful information about how to be a househusband.

Nor is succor to be had from that old standby, Dr. Spock, the main purpose of whose book is to coerce women into breast-feeding. To be straightforward, Dr. Spock doesn't know what the hell he's talking about, and like all doctors, he despises parents. Especially fathers. How could Spock know anything about managing children and a household? He not only married a silk heiress complete with upstairs and downstairs maids, she even typed his manuscript.

I have been studying the art and science of househusbandry full-time during the six months since our third child was born. In the hope of sparing others of my class the grief of learning it the hard way, I offer the following observations, excerpted from my forthcoming book, "What To Do Until Your Wife Gets Home."

BABIES

Babies do not like clean diapers. Mothers will dispute this, but the truth is obvious from simple observation. Every time you change a baby it will set right to work to get the diapers back into a satisfactory juicy condition. Sometimes even before you get the pins in.

When changing a boy baby it is wise to wear a raincoat. Boy babies are more versatile than girl babies, and have greater range.

Diaper services will ask you to rinse out the ickypoo, but they will take the diapers anyway. Let your conscience be your guide.

Young children are fascinated by babies; you can exploit this to get rid of the kid for a while. Simply put the baby in the stroller and set it outside the door. A child will come along and wheel it away. Sometimes the child will forget to bring it back, but the baby will let you know where it is.

Gerber's strained bananas is the best of the baby foods. Try to save some for baby. It also makes an excellent base for daquerries. Be judicious in your selection of baby foods; remember, spinach in, spinach out.

SMALL CHILDREN

The most important thing about taking care of children is the eschew creativity. If you are going to fix them tuna sandwiches for lunch, stifle the impulse to trim off the crusts and cut the sandwiches in hors d'oeuvres. If you do this once, they will demand it every day.

Do not ask the kids what kind of soup they want. Each will give a different answer, probably several. Pick the kind you want, and get it on the stove before they realize it is lunch time.

Never run out of potato chips. It is a fact that a child is incapable of swallowing such foods as hot dogs or milk without chips to wash it down.

Almost any child will go away if you give it a cookie. If you give it half a dozen cookies, it will hide quietly for some time, lest others see. Try to deal with the children separately at cookies time, and learn how to give each the impression, without actually lying, that you gave it more cookies than the others.

OLDER CHILDREN

Older children should be in school. If they are not, complain to the school board.

TEEN-AGERS

Never mind about teen-agers. When they need something the police will bring it to your attention.

HOUSEWORK

Excessive vacuuming damages carpets. Your wife will want to argue about this, but be firm. In the end, throw up your hands and say, "you go ahead and destroy the damn rugs if you want to, but I'm not going to get involved."

About spots. Spots, generally speaking, will not wash out. If you try to wash a spot off the wall, you wind up with a big clean spot that looks worse.

COOKING

Early on in your career as a househusband, try to cook a nice dinner for her every night. But avoid stew or hamburgers or other things you can handle. Go for Canard a l'Orange, Eggs Benedict, Puff Pastry, pig's feet. If she doesn't have fancy cookbooks, buy some and try the hardest recipes, the Cooking problem will just go away.

SHAWVILLE, Que. (CP) — "Everybody say cheese," ordered the photographer and more than half this town's 2,000 residents smiled as part of its centennial celebrations.

Original plans called for photographs of local dignitaries but the list of subjects became so long it was decided to include the town's entire population in one photograph.

Heinz Salad Cream. English Dressing

If you've ever been to England, you know Heinz Salad Cream. And you'll be delighted to know you can buy it here, too.
Heinz Salad Cream tastes rather like very good homemade salad dressing but just a bit creamier. Its delicately rich taste is perfectly delightful on lettuce wedges, tomato slices or hard boiled eggs. And the smooth, light texture blends beautifully in cabbage, potato, waldorf, seafood and meat salads or brings a subtle brightness to flavour sandwich fillings, dips, hot salads and casseroles.
Really, you can use Heinz Salad Cream just as you would an ordinary salad dressing. Indeed, you may find as the English have, that you prefer it.

Keen Interest in WAC's Old Riding

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The seat of South Okanagan, vacated Tuesday by the resignation of former premier W. A. C. Bennett, is sure to be the focal point of political interest in B.C. over the next few months.

Only hours after Bennett's Kelowna press conference Tuesday, interest in the seat was expressed from several camps, ensuring a lively campaign in the long-time Socred riding.

Although he has yet to declare himself, Progressive Conservative leader Derril Warren is known to be interested in the seat. And he got a bit of encouragement Tuesday from Scott Wallace, Conservative member for Oak Bay.

Wallace said a major difficulty of the Conservative party is that it can't be effective without its leader holding a seat in the legislature. The Tory said he hopes Warren will run in South Okanagan.

But Warren, who has been spending the last several days in the Kelowna area sounding out his chances in the coming byelection, says he will not decide on his candidacy until next Tuesday.

Wallace, who deserted Social Credit ranks when Bennett was premier, said the Socred leader's retirement from politics marks "a whole new era in B.C. politics, a real watershed in our history."

Wallace said it was unfortunate that Bennett had to resign after his party's crushing defeat at the polls last August, but added: "It is the kind of mistake that other great men make."

Liberal leader David Anderson said Tuesday from Armstrong that Bennett's retirement marks the end of a period of domination over B.C. politics by the 72-year-old leader.

Anderson said he "felt a genuine affection" for Bennett and added: "I hope that Mr. Bennett enjoys his retirement and I hope that he will consider writing his memoirs, which certainly would provide insight and fascination for us all."

The Liberal leader added that he hopes Bennett's son, Bill, considered a strong contender for his father's seat, "would not try to ride his father's coat-tails to elected office."

Anderson added he does not believe the the people of Kelowna would elect a "carpetbagger without roots in the Okanagan constituency," a reference to the growing list of possible candidates from other parties.

One man who did not express particular interest in the Okanagan seat but who dropped more than a hint or two about his desire for the leadership of the Social Credit party was former cabinet minister Phil Gaglardi, one of the Socreds defeated in the 1972 election.

Gaglardi told a Vancouver service club Tuesday the only hope for a rallying point for free enterprise voters is a "political strongman" which he said could very well be himself.

Gaglardi, 60, said age is not important. Experience, ability, dynamism and an ability to change with the times are what is needed.

"You're old when you get arrogant," he said, "when you refuse to listen to the other side. And the most arrogant premier this province has ever had is in there right now."

Gaglardi said he approves of the idea of Bill Bennett running for the South Okanagan seat.

As for himself and the Socred leadership, he said: "There's a tremendous amount of pressure on me from hundreds of organizations to run for the leadership. I'll have to make my decision pretty soon."

The Socred leadership convention will be held in November in Vancouver. Other prominent Socreds besides Gaglardi and Bill Bennett who are said to be interested include former cabinet ministers Leslie Peterson, Dan Campbell and Grace McCarthy and former MLA Herb Capozzi.

Also considered in the running are James Chabot (SC—Columbia River) and a number of other Socred MLAs elected in the 1972 vote.

CHAIN SAW KICKS, SLASHES BOY'S FACE

Brian Pedden, 2688 Selwyn, was cutting a root from a stump on Monday when the chain jumped out of the groove, caught him between an eye and the bridge of his nose and cut his scalp.

The boy's father, Donald Pedden, said, "He didn't have the strength to control it . . . A power saw shows no mercy. It makes a jagged cut."

COLD MAY CUT NEED FOR SPRAY

Scientists are hopeful they may not have to use a nerve-gas type pesticide spray on a forest in northern Vancouver Island.

W. C. (Cy) Phillips, in charge of forest protection, B.C. Forest Service, said today the "Good Lord" may do the job of controlling the spruce budworm and the use of the chemical fenithrothian may not be necessary.

He explained cold weather is preventing the eggs of the budworm from hatching.

"If low temperatures persist for the next couple of weeks, the Lord will have done the job for us," he said.

The use of fenitrothian was at first banned by Health Minister Dennis Cocke after Dr. G. D. Morris, the only physician at Port Alice, said the spray threatened the lives of people in the pulp and paper community.

Cocke later lifted the ban, providing it was used only in certain areas and not near any population.

The proposed spraying project is to take place on forest lands operated by Rayonier of Canada, MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. and the Crown.

Second Appeal Hearing for IWA

A second appeal by the Duncan local of the International Woodworkers of America over representation votes at three sawmills which it lost to another union will be considered by the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

The first appeal, in the form of the telegram from the union's lawyer, has been rejected by the board because of lack of evidence that the votes were not properly held.

In reporting the first decision, the board did not make clear that it was a telegram of appeal which was rejected and that a second appeal had been made and will go before the board.

The Nanaimo local of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada won the votes last month at Mayo Lumber and CIPA Lumber in Nanaimo and Ladysmith Forest Products and was later granted certification, replacing the IWA as bargaining agent for the 367 millworkers.

Now Young Wants to Set Up Alternative School in Surrey

Former Campbell River Senior Secondary School principal John Young has proposed a non-structured alternative high school be established in Surrey.

Thbe proposal will be dealt with by the Surrey-White Rock school board, probably July 9.

"The school wouldn't be all that much different from the Campbell River school," Young said in an interview today.

"The main difference will be that students enrolled will be volunteers. Students could choose whether they wish to go to a regular or an alternative school," he said.

Young was dismissed by Campbell River school board last September following a long dispute over the way he ran his progressive school, which was the only high school in the district.

Young said there are many independent alternative schools already operating in the province but he believes the public has the right to choose alternatives within the public system.

"Surely, this would be a very democratic response to the needs and desires of many parents and students," Young said, adding that he thinks such a school would be "swamped" with applicants.

Instead of the "harsh, authoritarian" system of learning practised in most high schools, Young says students at his alternative high school will learn through experience.

If a student wishes to learn about law, for example, he won't "sit in a classroom in five or six rows all day", Young says, but rather go out into the community to acquaint himself with lawyers and the courts.

"It will be very flexible," he said .Students may work in a job for a time, or do community volunteer work, or travel and study at the same time.

"If some students want to learn French they can go to Quebec for awhile and maybe then they'd learn something about Canadian history as well."

Young sees his school as accommodating up to 750 students at the most and he hopes, if it's approved, to get started in September.

"I would expect, after we get started however, that 30 to 50 per cent of the students would be away from the school at a time," he said.

The school will not be more expensive than traditional secondary institutions, he says, because he will simply ask the school board to give him an amount of money equal to the average amount spent on students and he will spend it accordingly.

Young said he is hopeful the Surrey board will approve his proposal.

"I expect that they would approve it, but I have no way of knowing," he said. "There's certainly great public demand."

Transfer Delayed

DUNCAN — Cowichan school board Monday tabled for a second time a motion to close the old Arcadian school at Duncan and transfer the 16 students to Charles Hoey primary.

The issue was tabled pending further investigation into costs involved in the transfer.

Arcadian school is leased from the city of Duncan. It is in need of structural improvements estimated to cost about $15,000. The school is old and has no playground area.

APPOINTEES GET 10% PAY HIKE

Salary increases of 10 per cent went into effect Tuesday for executive assistants appointed by the B.C. Government.

The raise brought the salaries of the political appointees, of which there are about 20, to $17,628, up from $16,020.

Also given 10 per cent raises were administrative assistants and research officers for the Social Credit and Liberal parties, and the secretary and assistant secretary to Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen.

The raises follow the recent announcement of a 10 per cent pay hike for the province's 31,000 civil servants, with those employees making less than $750 per month getting a flat $75 monthly increase.

Summer Police Row In Vancouver

A row over the function of law students working as summer policemen that erupted in Vancouver doesn't apply here, Chief John Gregory said today.

The scheme, which puts law students into cruisers and on the beat during summer vacations to give them a better idea of street-level law enforcement originated with Gregory four years ago and has now spread all across Canada.

In Vancouver, Anthony Peyton, a law student-officer here last year who is working with the Vancouver department this summer has lambasted the force there for "soft-stepping" the summer policemen.

The Vancouver department is not providing them with uniforms or identification, Peyton charged, and he feels his use to the force is "limited."

Last year, in Victoria, he said, "we were supplied with uniforms and identification. I made arrests, was able to assist in scuffle situations and by the end of the summer did beat work on my own."

The same situation applies here this year, Gregory said.

The four students working with the Victoria force have all been issued uniforms and have been "accepted" by regular officers.

Peyton, in part, blames the police union in Vancouver as well as concern by some senior officers over the students' qualifications for the problems there.

MAKE COLLEGES HANDY–DAILLY

NANAIMO (CP) — Education Minister Eileen Dailly said here Tuesday it is the government's responsibility to provide accessibility to universities but not necessarily to build universities.

Speaking at the conclusion of a tour of the present and future Malaspina College facilities, Mrs. Dailly said the northern part of Vancouver Island is not served by a college but she believes such areas should get community college services.

"This does not mean we intend to build large institutions similar to the one in Nanaimo," she said. "It would not be practical financially and I don't think educationally desirable."

Mrs. Dailly said new ways must be found of taking college services to the people in communities which are rural-oriented.

She said that once the federal and provincial governments agree on the acquisition of defence department land, hopefully within a few weeks, then construction of the new Malaspina campus could begin this fall.

B.C. Carved Up Over Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien went on a scalp-hunting foray in the Commons Tuesday night and the B.C. government came away dripping blood.

Ironically, Chretien's attack was touched off by B.C. New Democrat Tom Barnett (Comox-Alberni), who said the federal government lacks a clear aboriginal rights policy.

He accused Prime Minister Trudeau of being vague in replies to earlier questions dealing with Indian rights.

Chretien, who told a Commons committee in April he considers valid a 210-year-old royal proclamation that "establishes an obligation for the Crown to negotiate with the natives before taking land from the Indians," was quick to defend the federal government and just as quick to apply the political knife to Premier Barrett's NDP government in B.C.

He said he is still waiting for B.C. to live up to promises made during the 1972 provincial election campaign with regard to native rights.

The Barrett government had taken no action with regard to a Supreme Court of Canada decision last year which narrowly overturned a bid by a group of Indians to gain title to land taken away from them in the early 1900's. Although the appeal was lost, Ottawa considers it a moral victory for the Indians because the 4-3 vote went against the Indians on the strength of a technicality.

"I expected the NDP government in British Columbia to agree and say it was part of the policy of their government and party to recognize those rights," Chretien said.

We're Paying More, Says Food Chain

OTTAWA (CP) — A brief presented to the Commons food prices committee Tuesday shows that meat, eggs, honey and some vegetables recorded the largest wholesale price increases between April, 1972, and April, 1973.

Officials of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. of Canada Ltd., who presented the list, maintained that retailers are only passing on to consumers the price they have to pay for commodities.

The brief said the wholesale cost for eggs rose to 62 cents a dozen in April from 39 cents a dozen in April, 1972. Pork loin costs rose to 85 cents a pound from 65 cents, while honey went up to $12.50 for a dozen two-pound containers from $9.25 in April, 1972.

Other wholesale costs listed, with 1972 costs in brackets, include: yellow cooking onions, $8 a case of 24 two-pound bags ($2.15); Prince Edward Island potatoes, 75 cents per 10 pounds (36.5 cents); sugar, $13.25 for 100-pounds ($12.65); Aylmer peas, $5.27 for 24 19-ounce tins ($5.06); homogenized milk, 31.2 cents a quart (27.9 cents); coffee, $14.16 for 12 one-pound vacuum pack Maxwell House ($12.96); ground beef 94 cents a pound (74 cents); sirloin steak $1.48 a pound ($1.19) and Heinz ketchup $9.15 for 18 25-ounce bottles ($8.85).

Religious Groups Get CPP Exempt

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of religious groups that oppose contributions to insurance plans will be exempt from Canada Pension Plan (CPP) levies on self-employed earnings under a bill given first reading in the Commons.

The bill, promised earlier this year by Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde, will allow exemptions for such groups as Mennonites and Hutterites.

Other sections of the bill make provision for an annual audit of the CPP account and investment fund and make the government liable for legal expenses incurred by respondents when the welfare minister appeals decisions of review committees.

Exemptions will be given religious sects if in practice dependents are supported by the group.

$800,000 Fishing Loss

OTTAWA (CP) — The environment department expects to lose more than $800,000 in revenue this year as a result of government fishing bans or restrictions in lakes and rivers plagued with mercury pollution.

In a written reply to a Commons question from Randolph Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) Environment Minister Jack Davis said regulatory action to reduce or stop commercial fishing in polluted lakes and rivers has cost the government $6.3 million in revenue since 1970.

Partial or total bans affected 1,400 commercial fishermen in early stages of the mercury pollution problem, the minister said.

Removal or partial removal of the bans on certain species of fish during 1971 and 1972 allowed about 1,200 of these people to return to work.

In addition to federal bans, provincial restrictions on fishing licences or on the quantity of fish that can be caught affected the employment of 500 fishermen across the country, 360 of whom were able to return to fishing within a year. Most of the 360 switched to catching another species of fish.

Davis also said government regulations controlling the emission of mercury from chlor-alkali plants have reduced discharges of mercury into the water environment "by better than 99 per cent."

Do as I Say, Not As I Do . . .

TORONTO (CP) — When a coroner's jury ruled that the use of seat belts and shoulder harnesses should be mandatory, Dr. A. E. Noble, the presiding coroner, said:

"That's a good verdict."

When the inquest wound up five minutes later, Noble climbed into his car waved and drove off — without using a seat belt or shoulder harness.

The jury investigated the death of George Hlivka, 47, of nearby Mississauga.

Scientifically . . . What Impact?

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal ministry of science and technology is spending $60,000 to study the impact of science and technology through the mass media.

The study, billed as the first of its kind, will involve a major cross-country consumer poll — a series of 2,000 interviews, representing a random, cross-section of the populace.

The consumer poll, which will be conducted by a yet-to-be-named private survey company on contract to the government, will attempt to measure the public's awareness of things scientific, the public's interest in science and technical mattters, and the public's understanding of science and technology.

In other words, it will attempt to determine what people want to know about science and technology and what they might have already received.

A second part of the study will take an in-depth look at the middle-men and middle-women, mainly those working in the mass media and responsible for disseminating information to the public.

This part will involve a series of mailed questionnaires to some 700 editors, writers and information specialists outside of government. The aim is to determine not only how the media works, but also which individuals are most critical in this process of disseminating science information and whether the process can be improved.

One of the specific questions raised is whether reporters and broadcasters are satisfied with the way their science stories are edited, produced and published. Most writers and broadcasters will probably answer, "hardly ever!"

Altered Suites Pass Council

Plans for an apartment at the western entry to the university campus will be put before a public hearing, Saanich aldermen agreed Monday.

Council earlier turned back an application for rezoning in the hope of design changes being made by the owner, Racquet Club of Victoria Holdings Ltd., which proposes to sell the site at Gordon Head and McKenzie as a complete package, including a land use contract.

On the earlier occasion Mayor Hugh Curtis observed the plan looked like it was turned out of a sausage machine.

He was absent from Monday's meeting when Gordon Reeson, representing the club, was given permission to address council and show a new drawing of the proposed 90-suite frame building.

There were no substantial changes but the best features were accented and Reeson said 25-foot setbacks at two corners of the apartment had been increased to 30 feet and 37 feet, and there will be a six-foot brick screen wall on two sides.

The land use contract requires "generous use of trees . . . to give as much privacy as possible," Reeson said.

Ald Edith Gunning said she was impressed by the building's brick facade (in addition to the screen), recessed balconies, courtyard and portico.

Reeson, in response to comments, said more attention would be given to soundproofing and a further 10 feet of setback at the Gordon Head corner of the building.

Lay Counsellors Proposed by Expert

Professional counsellors, psychotherapists and parish ministers should devote a third of their time to training laymen, says a leading family counsellor.

Dr. Howard J. Clinebell of the school of Theology at Claremont, Calif., told participants in a seminar in techniques of counselling Monday at the University of Victoria that 42 per cent of people needing help turn to their minister, although most older churchmen have little or no training in counselling.

He says ministers should pass on these counselling methods to "sensitive" laymen in their parish who can assist the minister.

"Research indicates counselling by trained laymen and para-professionals in just as affective as counselling by professionals and may in some cases be better."

He says the old "50 minute hour" used by counsellors trained in Freudian psychology is fading from the scene.

Ministers Name Assistants

Also appointed as secretary to Highways Minister Graham Lea is Muriel Coates, at a salary of $936 a month. Appointed secretary to Young is Florence Brown, at $807 a month.

TRANSPARENTLY INCREDIBLE

A proposed Saanich park use bylaw will be updated.

Municipal parks committee Tuesday referred the bylaw to chairman Ald. Alan Newberry, parks administrator Bert Richman and municipal administrator W. M. Tremayne for review and recommendation.

Newberry noted the original intent had been to regulate the use of park beaches by horseback riders and he was grateful to Ald. Frank Waring for drawing attention of council to outdated structures in the draft form, which was first proposed a decade ago.

"Unfortunately this bylaw deals with neckers in cars and incredible statements like 'no one may wear a bathing costume in any way transparent . . .' " Newberry said.

He said he had scanned the draft and crossed out the dated, irrelevant and immaterial sections.

Backyard Burning—Regulation Soon

Fire Chief Harold Gains smoked out an opponent Tuesday as Saanich fire committee discussed a burning question.

The question of outdoor waste burning will shortly be resolved by new bylaw restrictions, committee was told.

Ald. Alan Newberry said he would continue his opposition to any such restrictions, a stand on which he has been consistent whenever backyard burning is discussed.

"People who complain about burning have nothing to do with pollution," Newberry charged after hearing from the chief and a letter of complaint from a resident near Lambrick Park.

"It's because they can't get along with their neighbor," said Newberry, calling firemen who respond to burning complaints "social workers."

To listen to some complainers might lead people to think "you had to wear an asbestos suit to go out in the garden in Saanich. This is not the case," Newberry said.

Noel admitted "there are many cranks . . ."

"I didn't say cranks," Newberry corrected.

"There are many legitimate complaints," Noel went on.

He thought Newberry would accept the type of restriction contemplated in the proposed bylaw, such as a description of an acceptable incinerator, clearances, cleaning requirements and limitations.

Mrs. Helene Dawson, 1721 Jefferson, had complained of "the evils of pollution and flying particles" from outdoor fires set by householders in the Lambrick area posing a "constant threat to neighbors."

But in Victoria, due to severe restrictions on outdoor burning, householders may enjoy their patios undisturbed by smoke, she said. She was distressed there was no rigid limitation on hours of burning in the proposed bylaw described recently by Noel.

Gains said there were a series of complaints in the Jefferson area and fire inspectors had checked them out.

He felt burning might be limited to mornings from daylight to noon, except for Sunday.

Most people can dispose of their combustible household waste in 10 or 15 minutes Saturday morning, he said.

Outdoor burning is "never going to be eliminated in Saanich," he said. "Build-up of debris is more serious than burning and I hope we never have bylaws to prevent it," said Gains.

Aid Program To Continue

By JAMES ANDERSON
Times Correspondent

SAIGON — Canada's decision to withdraw from the ICCS poses some problems in diplomatic niceties for the department of external affairs.

Does Ottawa need, or want, diplomatic missions in Saigon and Hanoi?

Should it have one without the other?

And how will Canada's aid program in South Vietnam, which reached $2.7 million last year, be administered?

Canadian diplomats here say the options are being worked over in Ottawa but no decision has been made.

Canada has no formal diplomatic relations with any of the countries in Indochina, although it has long accorded diplomatic recognition to South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, and announced official recognition of North Vietnam in February.

Through long years of involvement in the old International Control Commission and the new International Commission of Control and Supervision, Canadian diplomacy in this part of the world has been carried on out the back doors of the various peacekeeping missions.

Canada has few interests in the area other than the truce missions themselves. Consular matters were handled informally, or, if protocal was important, by the British.

The aid programs in South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos — which will be the main diplomatic theme in the future — were run by specialists attached to the peacekeeping missions.

In the past few weeks, Andre Gingras, the Canadian International Development Agency's man in Saigon, has moved out from the shelter of the ICCS mission and set up as office of his own in a suite in the Hotel Majestic.

Officials say it would be possible to simply leave him there on his own, when the ICCS mission goes home. There are a few countries where CIDA has offices with no other Canadian diplomatic representation.

But if no Canadian mission is opened here, the CIDA office could be moved out of Saigon and the aid program operated from the Canadian embassy in Bangkok or the dormant ICC delegation in Laos.

Senior officials say that any decision about opening an embassy in Saigon may be tied up with the question of relations with North Vietnam.

There have been no Canadian diplomats in Hanoi since the old ICC for Vietnam packed up in March, and opening relations with North Vietnam might turn out to be difficult or even impossible.

HANOI — 18 pt sub

When the Minister for External Affairs, Mitchell Sharp, visited Hanoi in March, he mentioned the possibility with North Vietnamese officials, who said only that it was a matter to be discussed "at a later date."

Hanoi Hasn't Picked Up Offer

Sharp also repeated Canada's offer to match its aid to South Vietnam with equal help for the North. But Hanoi has made no move to pick up the offer.

The North Vietnamese, in fact, regard Canada's diplomatic recognition of South Vietnam as "incorrect." They say that the Paris peace agreements place the Saigon administration on an equal footing with the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

Both, according to the agreement, are supposed to give way eventually to some new administration determined by negotiations and elections.

But Canada says it can not recognize two governments in one place and since Ottawa already recognizes Saigon, Sharp in the Commons last week avoided even referring to the PRG by name, calling it simply "the other South Vietnamese party."

Withdrawal from the ICCS may ease the feeling in Canada that there should be strict equality in the treatment of North and South Vietnam. But Ottawa would probably prefer to keep as close a balance as possible in its dealings with Saigon and Hanoi.

The aid program which would be the main function of an embassy or consulate in Saigon is directed mainly to humanitarian tasks.

Canada has in recent years helped to open, equip and operate a tuberculosis clinic in Quang Ngai and a rehabilitation centre for war victims in Quihnhon, both cities in the northern part of South Vietnam. Both those have been turned over to the South Vietnamese authorities in the past year.

The most active project at the moment is a pilot program being started in the Mekong Delta to create a provincial training centre for public health officials at Long Xuyen and a set of smaller health centers in nearby towns.

There is a physiotherapy training centre in Saigon which is being helped by Canada.

CRTC to Cut New Slices Of TV Pie

OTTAWA (CP) — Citizen groups, high-powered teams of executives and imaginative television programmers will mingle this week and next as the Canadian Radio-Television Commission holds hearings on third television service for Edmonton and Vancouver.

The Edmonton hearings begin Thursday.

The lucrative Edmonton and Vancouver markets have drawn a total of eight applications, seven of which envisage becoming a part of the planned Global television network. Some applicants, however, have expressed concern at Global's plan to take up to three-quarters of much prime-time advertising revenue.

A complication with the Vancouver applications, to be heard at hearings beginning Monday, is a CBC application to set up a station in Victoria, using the same channel the Vancouver applicants want. But some Vancouver interests argue in documents filed with the CRTC that the CBC can use another channel for Victoria.

The Edmonton-Vancouver applications have drawn a flood of interventions from groups who say any third television service should not be commercial.

Among groups opposing planned commercial stations are branches of the Association for Public Broadcasting, the B.C. Teachers Federation, the B.C. Environmental Council, branches of the Committee for an Independent Canada, and the Surrey Arts Society.

One Edmonton applicant, Western Coded Television Ltd., is seeking authority for pay-television service to accompany its proposed regular television service. It estimates the pay-TV service, which would be the first authorized in Canada, would bring in revenues of $1.5 million in the first year of operation and $4.2 million in the fourth year.

In pay-TV, the subscriber pays for each program he watches, with the possible exception in some cases of occasional free shows. Although pay-TV systems have been installed in some Canadian hotels, the companies have not sought CRTC licences.

The Vancouver-Edmonton applicants have generally proposed innovative programming, with special attention promised for cultural, ethnic and educational programs in many cases.

One Vancouver applicant, Chako Broadcasting Ltd., says it will take a close look at traditional news programming concepts.

Instead of "news, weather and sports," it asks, why not "news, leisure and sex?"

Another Vancouver applicant, West Coast Broadcasting Ltd., proposes a system of "citizen reporters," defined as "non-professional people of diverse interests who are involved in their communities."

West Coast People Retire Earlier

West Coast also proposes a 10 p.m. newscast, rather than the usual 11 p.m. one, because "a survey completed by us has verified a long-standing suspicion that a vast segment of West Coast people like to go to bed earlier than in other parts of Canada."

The Vancouver ownership interests include:

Chako Broadcasting—Former CBC news announcer Stanley Burke, Chako president, would hold the largest percentage of shares—13 per cent. Second largest owner would be Cable Utility Communications Ltd. of Scarborough, Ont., at 11.8 per cent. Another television news man, Peter Stursberg of Ottawa, would be a lesser shareholder, along with dozens of Vancouver residents and community groups. Burke would host an evening news-magazine show on the proposed station.

West Coast Broadcasting—Largest shareholder would be Vancouver television executive Rai Purdy, at 13 per cent. James Vernon, Vancouver hotel owner, would have 9.75 per cent while former provincial Conservative leader Davie Fulton would be one of many minor shareholders.

Great Pacific Industries—Owned 48.7 per cent by Jim Pattison Enterprises Ltd. and 3.5 per cent by two Pattison directors. Jim Pattison Broadcasting Ltd. operates radio stations CJOR Vancouver and CFRW and FRW-FM Winnipeg.

Projected revenues and operating costs vary considerably between applicants in each city, part of the difference being different expectations for the cost of Global service.

Edmonton Video forecasts revenue of $3.9 million and costs of $4.1 million in the third year, while NorAl estimates revenue of $4.2 million and costs of $3.1 million.

Continental Communications (Alberta) Ltd. expects revenues of $2.1 million and costs of $2.3 million in the third year, while A. M. Shoults expects revenue of $2.65 million and costs of $2.7 million.

Western Coded Television, calculating regular television and pay-TV together, expects net before-tax profits of $49,000 in the first year, rising to $160,000 in the third year. It and NorAl are the only applicants to expect revenues to exceed costs in the first year.

Among Vancouver applicants, Chako Broadcasting expects third-year revenues of $4.3 million, compared with costs of $3.9 million that year, while West Coast forecasts a substantial loss-revenues of $1.95 million, costs of $3.06 million.

Great Pacific submitted two third-year estimates: A profit of $363,000 with Global affiliation, $1.5 million without.

With Global taking a large slice of advertising revenue, Great Pacific estimates third-year revenue at $3.3 million. With no Global share, third-year revenue would be $8.8 million. Costs, however, would increase to $7.3 million from $2.9 million.

Both West Coast and Chako Broadcasting have filed with the CRTC letters written to Global Communications expressing concern about Global's contractual arrangements.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GOODMAN AND COLLIS — Jack and Donna, Art and Hazel are gone but not forgotten. They set sails on June 6, 1970.
Remembrance is a golden chain. Death tries to break, but all in vain.
To have friends, to keep them and then to part,
Is a great sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe many things,
But this they wipe out never—
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
—Forever remembered by Watson and Joyce.

McLWAINE — In Loving Memory of my Dear Husband, Robert, and devoted Father, who departed from us on June 6, 1972.
His smiling way and pleasant face,
Are a pleasure to recall;
He had a kindly word for each,
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Verna; sons, Ross, Brian, Steven and family.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

4 MURDERS BLAMED ON 'DEATH SQUAD'

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Murders of four men found riddled with bullets during the weekend were attributed Monday to the vigilante "death squad" by the local press.

The bodies were found in three Rio Suburbs and one had a sign attached which read, "I will not molest minors or rob taxis any more." The note was signed "The shadow-death squad."

The "death squad" is believed to be formed of policemen who execute petty thieves and criminals instead of submitting them to justice.

Student Teams Hired For Health Checks

Five teams of students began work for the metro health department this week, conducting summer surveys on shoreline pollution, downtown housing and public restroom facilities.

The students, 29 in all and mostly from the university, will earn from $407 to $461 a month for their three-month stint with salaries paid for by the provincial government.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior public health officer in Greater Victoria, said two five-member teams will be conducting visual checks of 20 lakes in the district as well as certain sections of coast, on the lookout for sources of pollution.

Where checks of the shorelines suggest a need, bilogical and chemical testing will be undertaken as well as dye-testing of septic tank systems, he said.

One team will be working from Sooke west of Port Renfrew, which will include Sooke harbor as well as the five fresh water lakes in that area.

The other will cover the 15 lakes in the rest of Greater Victoria, including the Gulf Islands.

A third team of three will gather information on rental accommodation downtown, assessing what kind of people are utilizing rooming houses and apartments and noting what kitchen and bathroom facilities are available for such quarters as house-keeping rooms.

A fourth team of three will survey rest room facilities available in restaurants, service stations and parks, gathering data against which the department can measure the comlaints it sometimes gets from tourists.

A fifth team, of about 13, will assist nurses in the variety of health clinics operated by the department, said Whitbread.

REAL ESTATE MEN VISIT PORTLAND

A group of 59 Victoria real estate agents left for Portland today to study state legislation on land zoning to see how it compares with British Columbia's Bill 42.

They will also exchange information with the Portland Real Estate Board on B.C. progress on housing for senior citizens and low income groups.

The visit, sponsored by the Victoria Real Estate Board, will involve a series of meetings for the remainder of the week.

It will be the third exchange visit with the Portland board.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico and East Germany established diplomatic relations Tuesday and will exchange ambassadors soon, the foreign ministry announced. A spokesman said Mexico expects to continue its relations with West Germany.

Beach Fire Pits Get Second Look

Oak Bay council was asked today to take a "sober second look" at its decision to have cement pits for beach fires built on Willows Beach.

Council's A committee agreed to ask council to reconsider the problems that could arise from permanent fire containers on the beach.

A cement pit is "an invitation to use that particular spot in perpetuity," for fires, said Ald. Brian Smith.

A resident whose home is near the fire pit may object that beach parties are always near his house, said Ald. Norman Plimlott.

Fire Chief William Pearson said that open beach fires on Willows Beach have never caused any major problem. And unless the pits are well shielded, he said, children will be jumping into them and running the risk of burning their feet on embers.

★ ★ ★

In other business, the committee discussed and then tabled the question of allowing self-service gas stations in Oak Bay.

Pearson told the committee he'd be happy to see the question tabled for six months, until there was more data on possible fire hazards of such stations.

The committee heard proposals by two representatives of Standard Oil Co. to change its university service station at Henderson and Cedar Hill Crossroad into a self-service station.

Standard representative W. J. Walmsley said he knew of no fires caused by self-service stations.

Moon Soil Stimulates Plants

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI)—Earth plants treated with moon soil grow better and live longer than ordinary plants, according to tests conducted by Vernon Scholes, a biology professor at the University of South Alabama.

"We were looking for plant pathogens," Scholes said, referring to elements that might be harmful to plant life, "but then we noticed that for some reason the plants that had been treated with lunar material grew better and lived longer than those without it."

Scholes carried out the tests for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, using moon soil brought back by astronauts. He said the experiments involved single cells and entire plants.

He said the moon dirt apparently stimulates the chlorophyll in the plants.

HELMET LAW IRKS SIKH CYCLISTS

LONDON (CP) — Motorcycle-owning Sikhs are angry at the refusal of the British government to grant them immunity from a new helmet law.

Male Sikhs must wear a turban at all times under a 400-year-old religious rule and this would be impossible under the protective helmets required since June 1.

The supreme council of Sikhs in Britain advised Sikhs during the weekend to avoid riding their motorcycles for the time being. The council argues that an exception should be made similar to one in wartime when Sikh soldiers did not have to wear military head dress.

BELLRINGER STOP TO BE A MUSICAL ONE

The bells will ring in the towers of Victoria's Christ Church Cathedral June 18 as 12 English Bellringers stop off on their tour of Canada and the United States.

The ringers are members of the Ancient Society of College Youths, a ringing society established in 1637.

The party tour which has taken more than six years to organize, will stop in Montreal, Quebec City, Calgary, Mission and Vancouver before coming to Victoria June 18.

While in the city, they plan to ring two full peals of more than 5,000 changes, each of which will take two hours to complete.

The group will also join with local ringers in their weekly practice.

Shrine Hospitals Need $100 Millions

The chief of the 900,000 Shriners in Canada, the United States and Mexico arrived in Victoria Tuesday on a fund raising and membership drive.

Imperial Potentate Henry B. Struby, of Evansville, Ind., has spent all but 47 days since last July touring the 172 shrines established by the order.

He estimates he has travelled the equivalent of 10 times around the world. His tour has included visits to the 22 hospitals for crippled children and the three burns units maintained by Shriners.

As imperial potentate, Struby serves as chairman of the board of trustees for all Shrine hospitals and is responsible for an annual budget of $28 million.

His term ends July 6 at a convention to be held this year in Atlanta, Georgia. His successor will be Jacob Wingerter of New Jersey.

However, in July, 1974 a British Columbian, Jack M. Streight, Q.C., of New Westminster, will be elected imperial potentate at the convention in Toronto.

Streight will be the third Canadian to head the 100-year-old organization. There are only 10 Canadian temples out of a total of 172.

Struby is attempting to promote a $100 million club because the $5 annual donation from each member plus bequests and monies raised by Shrine circuses no longer meet rising hospital costs.

Members donate $100 or include a bequest for that amount in their wills.

Struby said more funds are needed to carry on the work with crippled and burned children because hospital costs have risen 75 per cent in the past five years.

Shriners also fund research in burn treatment and special training for doctors and nurses at their three burn units.

Iran Vows Vengeance

TEHRAN (WP)—Prime Minister Abbas Hoveida vowed harsh punishment Tuesday for the still-unidentified killers of an American army colonel slain in the Iranian capital, as a guerrilla radio broadcast threatened more violence against the American presence here.

Denouncing the murder of Lt.-Col. Lewis Hawkins Saturday as a "most stupid cowardly thing," Hoveida predicted in an interview that the two killers would be caught and "our courts will not be lenient."

First Ticket In 54 Years

INDIANAPOLIS — "I should have known better, Judge," said Walter Graham, an 87-year-old motorist who received his first traffic ticket in 54 years and asked to be fined.

Graham told Judge Francis Thomason Tuesday he needed to be taught a lesson. The judge obliged and fined Graham $15.

The elderly motorist, restricted to daytime driving, was arrested the night of May 3 after a patrolman spotted his car weaving across the centre line. He was charged with wreckless driving and violating the licence restriction.

WALLACE

BAKER

STATELINE, Nev. — Gov. George C. Wallace is leaning toward running for re-election in Alabama next year, but his course in the 1976 presidential years "remains to be seen."

The wheelchair-bound Wallace, conducting a news conference Tuesday at the national governors conference, said if he did decide to run, "I'll be healthy enough to beat anyone who runs against me."

As he has before, Wallace declined to comment on the Watergate case, other than to disaccociate himself from the demand of Wisconsin Gov. Patrick J. Lucey that President Nixon resign to restore the prestige of the presidency.

NEW YORK — They had the lights on in Carnegie Hall Tuesday night, but they weren't really necessary because when Josephine Baker performs she supplies her own electricity.

There were about 2,700 bakerites in the place to welcome back the U.S.-born singer-dancer, who built most of her fabulous career in France as a star of the "Follies Bergere" revues and other lavish entertainments.

The star's "international revue," which is mostly Josephine singing, dancing and talking, shows her as lithe, glamorous and as rousing a singer as ever in this week of her 67th birthday, which was last Sunday.

DETROIT — Joe Garofalo said the caricature of a well endowed and nearly topless woman on the side of his tow truck, nicknamed "the happy hooker," often brought chuckles from passersby.

But the Detroit patrolman who stopped the truck earlier this week said the painting was too risque.

OTTAWA — State secretary Hugh Faulkner said Tuesday he is checking a report that the CBC has destroyed films of the former television series the Plouffe Family.

He told the commons the incident has been drawn to his attention and he plans to discuss it with CBC officials.

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) asked for assurance that "no more destruction will take place pending a decision on the preservation of important archival material."

The series, focusing on a French-Canadian family, ran in the late 1950s. It was broadcast in French and, in its last year, in English.

ORLANDO, Fla.—Federal agents have confiscated $5.7 million worth of financier Glenn Turner's corporate holdings and padlocked the headquarters of his cosmetic firm Koscot Interplanetary Inc. for non-payment of federal income taxes.

The action came less than three weeks after Turner, Boston attorney Lee Bailey and eight others were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud.

The 100 persons inside the Orlando headquarters of the cosmetic firm were allowed to finish their work day, then the building was padlocked and "U.S. government seizure" notices were placed on all entrances to the building, along with warnings that the contents of the building were not to be tampered with.

BOSTON — Roy. G. Watson, former publisher and editor of Houston Post, has been named president of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, at the denomination's annual meeting. Watson had been treasurer of the church for 32 years.

MOSCOW — Exiled modernist painter Marc Chagal set foot on his native Russian soil this week for the first time in more than 50 years to be welcomed by a small but enthusiastic group of officials and admirers.

PARIS — French film starlet Brigitte Bardot, 38, announced Wednesday she is retiring from movies because "I have had enough." In an interview with the French radio, the actress said she had no plans for the future other than "start to live."

KEY JOB FOR LAIRD

Nixon Shuffles Staff

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon announced three moves today in a major rebuildng of his Watergate-shaken White House staff.

Gen. Alexander Haig is to retire from army duty and continue as chief of the White House staff, a post he has held on an interim basis.

Former defence secretary Melvin Laird is appointed counsellor to the president for domestic affairs and, in that cabinet-rank post, will in effect succeed John Ehrlichman who resigned April 30 along with the former staff chief H. R. Haldeman.

Ronald Ziegler, while remaining as press secretary, will be given the added title of assistant to the president and given a role in White House policy making.

Today's announcement said Haig will be responsible for "co-ordination and supervision of the day-to-day operations and responsibilities of the White House staff."

Laird, a former U.S. House of Representatives member from Wisconsin, "will be responsible for the over-all formulation and co-ordination of domestic policy," said the White House.

Ziegler, with the resignation of Herbert Klein as director of communications, will assume responsibility for the communications office as well as the press office. It said:

"As assistant to the president, he will be involved in policy meetings both with the president and other senior staff members, and also will retain his briefing responsibilities and daily contact with members of the press."

In other developments:

● Ehrlichman has claimed that former U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell gave his specific approval to plans to bug the Democrats' Watergate headquarters.

In a deposition released Tuesday, Ehrlichman quoted deputy presidential campaign manager Jeb Stuart Magruder as saying that Mitchell gave oral approval of the bugging operation.

● Sam Dash, Senate Watergate committee counsel said today he will seek through negotiations, rather than subpoena, to obtain logs of conversations between Nixon and John Dean, ousted

Military intelligence sources said they believed the attacks on Ang Snoul and the nearby town of Kompong Tram were designed to coincide with the opening of the second round of Paris negotiations aimed at ensuring implementation of the Indochina ceasefire.

Radio reports from government roops who fled the town with at least three ambulance loads of wounded, said most of the town fell at 4 a.m. PDT and that government troops still holding one position were under heavy mortar attack.

PARIS—Top United States and European monetary officials met here today amid growing speculation of imminent new measures by the Nixon administration to restore confidence in the United States dollar.

Despite the U.S. devaluation last February and the floating of major currencies the following month, the dollar has declined steeply in recent days, and the price of gold has risen to all-time records.

In London today, however, the price of gold dropped and the dollar improved at the start of trading on Europe's seesaw money markets, where gold over the past several weeks has skyrocketed and the dollar has crumbled.

Dealers attributed today's developments to profit taking by speculators who drove the price of dollars to new lows in hectic trading Tuesday.

Most money experts before today's trading began agreed that the scramble to buy gold and sell dollars showed no sign of ending.

French President Georges Pompidou Tuesday night told a group of international bankers that "we are witnessing the third devaluation of the (U.S.) dollar."

The fact that Shultz has made a quick change in plans —he will make his appearance here today and then head back immediately to the United States—has added to the note of uneasiness.

Tuesday night, Nixon assembled his closest economic aides in Washington for policy discussions on the U.S. economy.

Republican Senate Leader Hugh Scott said after the meeting the president was actively considering domestic economic measures to counter inflation.

Gold in London dropped back $6.50 an ounce to $120.50 at the close of trading.

Firemen Give Notice

Residents of North Saanich will be without fire protection as of 10 p.m. Thursday unless internal problems in the volunteer fire department are resolved, fire chief Wally Snow said today.

The ultimatum—solve the problems or else—was issued to municipal council after a fire department meeting Tuesday night. The men have given council 48 hours to set things straight.

Snow said 11 members of the 21-member department have already resigned over the dispute with council, but said fire protection would continue until the 48 hours had run out.

"The public can rest assured that they will get fire protection until Thursday night, but unless something happens at that time, that will be the end of it."

Snow said a meeting with council will be held before the 48-hour deadline, but just exactly when, he wasn't sure.

The dispute, he said, revolves mainly around a matter of administration.

Deputy fire chief Ron Evans was more specific about the problems in the department:

"The main thing in this fight is communication and co-operation between our fire department and the council. There are many things underneath that, but communications and co-operation are the basic issues—many of these things we're not prepared to bring to the public, at least not at this time."

Both Snow and Evans said a statement would be issued to residents of North Saanich telling them the outcome of the meeting.

As of this morning, North Saanich aldermen knew nothing of the meeting, or of the dispute.

Crash Strait No-Man Sea

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The most dangerous area of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, where the second collision between two freighters within a month occurred Tuesday is a No-Man's Land.

Neither the Canadian nor the U.S. coast guard system of traffic monitoring extends that far.

Officials agreed, however, because of the prevalence of fog banks in the area, it was probably the place where marine traffic is most vulnerable to incidents such as Tuesday's.

Two large freighters — the 544-foot container vessel Oriental Mariner and the 564-foot log carrier Way Way — rammed into each other Tuesday about 12:30 p.m. in American waters just north of Neah Bay on the Washington side of the Strait.

The spot was barely five-miles away from where the Indian vessel Vishva Shakti and the Australian freighter Allunga collided May 16.

A U.S. coast guard spokesman in Seattle admitted today that monitoring on their side of the coast only covered the area from Puget Sound up to Port Angeles.

A spokesman of the ministry of transport's Vancouver office confirmed that the Canadian system, too, had a "blind spot" in the most crucial stretch of the Strait.

Both countries' systems are based on voluntary reporting of ships as the first phase of programs that eventually will have all traffic being tracked by radar from shore bases. Ships will also be required to report their positions to various check points once they reach Cape Flattery and head into the mouth of the Strait.

The Oriental Mariner was limping at a slow four knots toward Seattle today for repairs, her bow badly battered, both anchors torn away and her No. 1 hold damaged.

The coast guard official said she is due to arrive in Seattle about 9:30 p.m. tonight.

Because of her extensive damage to the bow two tugs tried to tow her by the stern Tuesday. A third larger tug was despatched in the night hours.

Machinists Hit 5 Cities

Times News Services

In the third of a series of spot strikes, Air Canada machinists walked off the job in Halifax, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon and Thunder Bay, Ont., today.

A union spokesman said a walkout would take place at another — as-yet undisclosed — location Thursday.

Speculation is that Thursday's walkout could be centered on Toronto, the only major centre in Canada not hit so far in the dispute between the union and the country's national airline.

The only centre which reported flights cancelled today was Winnipeg.

An Air Canada spokesman acknowledged a union charge that the airline had kept 150 superyisory personnel at the Skyline Hotel in Toronto in anticipation of a strike in that city, but said the number of people "on stand-by" was closer to 50.

TWO MAYORS WALK OUT

Times News Services

CHARLOTTETOWN — The mayors of Canada's second and third largest cities walked out of the annual meeting of the Federation of Mayors and Municipalities conference Tuesday.

Toronto's David Crombie and Vancouver's Art Phillips both said the conference was irrelevant to the needs of municipalities.

Crombie, who swept into office last December at the head of a reform slate, rapped the meeting as purley a "social occasion."

Phillips said he felt he was "just wasting my time" at the meeting.

"There are things to do" at home, he added.

At the core of the dispute between the large cities and the smaller municipalities is a debate over the way to conduct talks with senior governments.

The smaller communities — which hold the balance of power at the meeting — favor a concerted approach to provincial and federal officials. The larger cities want each community to bargain on its own with senior governments.

BALL PLAYER IN BOMB PLOT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Live bombs were found aboard the cruise ship, Island Princess, at sea Tuesday and a former major league baseball player was arrested and accused of trying to extort $250,000 from the steamship line, the FBI said.

Gerry Priddy, 53, former player for the Detroit Tigers and other teams, was arrested when he tried to pick up the ransom money at a drop.

Air Canada, CN Record Years

OTTAWA — Canada's two Crown Corporation transportation firms showed strong financial gains in 1972, according to annual reports tabled Tuesday in the Commons.

Air Canada earned a record net income of $8.6 million and Canadian National also had a record year with an operating profit of $48.3 million.

However, payments on a long-term CN debt produced a deficit of $17.8 million.

Record Vancouver Drug Bust

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record 173 suspected drug traffickers were charged here Tuesday following a massive undercover operation by two Vancouver police constables and a seven-man surveillance team in the last five months.

The roundup began as police and RCMP officers arrested at least 53 persons charged mainly with possession and trafficking of heroin. Of the 173 warrants issued, 122 deal with heroin distribution.

The two undercover officers were recent graduates of the police academy when the investigation began Feb. 5. During their work they made 80 buys on Vancouver streets, 32 involving heroin.

The surveillance team then followed suspects for names and addresses, resulting in 90 persons being charged with 205 offences.

Staff Sgt. Sid Devries said most of the persons charged are small-time street dealers. However, two of those sought are considered very big, dealing in ounces of heroin. Asked if the roundup would put a dent in Vancouver's heroin system, he replied, "It will if they keep them in jail."

Those arrested Tuesday were held without bail and were scheduled to appear in court today.

A spokesman for the RCMP drug squad in the Victoria area said today the Vancouver undercover operation did not lead to any arrests here.

"We weren't involved in any way." The charges were "totally independent of our operation," RCMP superintendent Jim Nelson said.

The previous drug roundup record was in October, 1972, when 123 Vancouver-area people were charged in a nationwide investigation by RCMP. The local total was more than half that of the rest of Canada.

U.S. Fuel Clamps Sought

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The Senate has overwhelmingly voted to direct President Nixon to clamp strict controls on the oil industry's allocation of fuel to help ease the gasoline shortage.

By a vote of 85 to 10 Tuesday, the senate approved a bill that would require the president to establish mandatory government fuel allocation regulations and impose them whenever he determines that any energy source is in short supply.

Sen. Henry Jackson, chairman of the interior committee, said the lopsided vote showed there was a "new mood of urgency" in Congress over the energy crisis.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association Tuesday said a check of more than 1,500 gas stations around the U.S. showed two-thirds of them had adequate supplies.

The survey showed the southeast and northwest sections appeared to have the tightest gasoline supplies at present.

Blazing Gun Escape

COMPIEGNE, France (AP) —Jacques Mesrine, wanted in Canada for several murders and robberies, made a spectacular gun-wielding escape today from a courthouse in this town north of Paris. In the process he used a judge as a shield and shot a guard.

It was the second time he slipped through the hands of the law. He escaped from a maximum security jail in Quebec last year after cutting through two wire fences.

Mesrine was brought here to appear in a cheque-fraud case. Handcuffed, he asked to go to the lavatory.

Later in court when the judge walked in Mesrine pulled out a gun and threatened to kill him unless he were set free. The guards immediately unlocked the handcuffs.

Shielded by the judge, Mesrine walked slowly past the dumbfounded spectators, slipped into a getaway car and drove away.

He was intercepted by a police van nearby but shot a guard through the shoulder and disappeared.

Banner Year for B.C. Lumber Seen From U.S. House Starts

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Housing starts in the United States are running 15 per cent above expectations, indicating another banner year for British Columbia's forestry industry.

The housing boom means the U.S. will import about 9 billion board feet of lumber from Canada, rather than the 8 billion forecast six months ago.

Most of this lumber comes from British Columbia which relies heavily upon the forest industry as a basis for general economic strength.

Housing starts in the U.S. totalled 488,100 in the first quarter of this year, well above the 250,000 expected.

The starts include all construction on single-family and multiple family dwellings and apartments, with a 20-suite apartment counting as 20 housing starts.

The surge of prosperity for the B.C. forestry industry in 1972 was based upon a record 2.4 million housing starts in the U.S., plus strong demand for lumber in Japan and Europe.

The increased demand followed three years of moderate demand and low prices.

However, at the end of 1972, fears were expressed by the industry that the U.S. had surplus accommodation as a result of the boom and housing starts would only total 2 million in 1973.

At their rate in the first quarter, they will hit 2.3 million this year, almost matching the astounding level of 1972.

B.C. forestry industry spokesmen, ever cautious, are revising their estimates upwards to 2.2 million housing starts this year and gearing up for additional exports to the U.S.

The high level of demand for lumber will keep wholesale prices at or near their current levels.

Lumber shipped to the U.S. by water hit an all-time record price level in May.

It is currently in a period of "adjustment" meaning down about $10 on prices around $210 per thousand board feet. A further slide could have been anticipated if demand slackened. However, the continuing high demand is expected to hold prices firm, which means give or take $15 per thousand.

One company spokesman said: "You have to remember that the price of lumber bounces around like the Dow Jones average. Because of the continuing high demand, however, we are looking forward to relative stability in price."

Meanwhile, in the interior of B.C., lumber shipped to the U.S. by rail has undergone much sharper price fluctuations because sales are made on a shorter term basis.

Rail-borne lumber prices peaked out in February and have fluctuated sharply since that time but this week were back close to February's record levels.

British Columbia's own housing starts in the first quarter of 1973 were 6,010, down 14.8 per cent from the same time last year.

The statistic is of greater interest to the B.C. construction industry than for lumber producers who sell the bulk of their production in the export market.

The drop in B.C. housing starts was due to a decline in apartment construction. Starts of single family dwellings totalled 3,323 in the first quarter, up 13.9 per cent over the same period in 1972.

Reserves Rise

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's gold and foreign currency reserves rose by $621 million in May to reach a total of $6.739 billion, the treasury has announced.

But a government spokesman said $332 million of the increase was accounted for by dollar loans raised by publicly owned British bodies.

The May increase followed a rise of $82 million in April, which again was mainly accounted for by public-se borrowing of foreign currency.

He brings to his new position considerable experience in all aspects of the trust and mortgage business.

Prospects 'Encouraging'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Board president Alan Campney told the Vancouver Board of Trade Monday that prospects for expanding Canadian trade with the eastern European bloc are encouraging.

Campney led a recent trade and goodwill mission of Vancouver businessmen to Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary and Romania.

"On the basis of quick impressions, I think the Bulgarians showed the most genuine interest in increasing trade relationships with Canada," he said.

The Canadian government's recently-concluded trade agreements with several of the nations probably made them more receptive to the mission, he added.

Campney said joint ventures with foreign business firms is a new idea for most of the countries. Except in Romania, where foreigners are allowed to hold up to 49 per cent of the equity, their participation is limited to debt financing, he said.

The board of trade president said difficulties encountered in trading with the countries, arise mainly from the non-convertibility of currencies.

"Individual currencies are not convertible among the countries within the group let alone into other foreign currencies," Campney said, adding the countries are aiming for a common currency.

FISH SALES BOOM

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wholesale value of British Columbia fish products marketed in 1972 reached a new record high of $159 million, fisheries service statistics show.

The products include 6.9 million pounds of halibut valued at $4.3 million, caught by B.C. fishermen and landed at U.S ports. The previous record total was $223.7 million, marketed in 1966.

High prices for practically all types of fish and the largest chum salmon return since 1954 combined to make the record year.

Fishermen's earnings at $75.1 million were the highest ever, about $16.5 million more than 1971 and $13.7 million above the 1966 record of $61.4 million.

Landings of 164.4 million pounds of salmon worth a record $50.3 million were 9.9 million pounds and $5.3 million greater than the record 1970 landings. The wholesale value exceeded all previous years and was valued at $114.3 million, $14.3 million greater than 1968, the highest value of any previous year.

Of the other major species, wholesale value of halibut in 1972 was $16,904,000; herring, $12,612,000; grey cod, $3,428,000; tuna, $3,088,000; crab and shrimp, $1,730,000; and sole, $1,504,000.

McGee . . . After the Verdict, Tears of Relief

Dear Kris:

Listen, kid. Try and get thru this note as best you can. We all figured wrong and I am being taught a lesson in a jail. O.k. only 2 people know for sure what happened. God & I. You gotta die to learn.

No matter what happens to me because of this nitemare, try to remember me as the strength you thought I was.

When you feel there is nothing you can do, then try to comfort my dear old dad and brother. Try to tell my mom that I really love her. Tell my sister how much I loved all she has done for me and make sure Rose-Marie knows that I'm sorry things went this way.

Of most importance don't hate the crown as they only did their job and don't discredit Al Roger and Mr. Branson as they did their best.

Please don't hate or blame Larry Charlie or Marilyn as they all have good reason to themselves and that is the animal nature to survive.

Tho I am innocent of this charge try to pretend I am paying the price of all the bad I got away with.

But most of all try to realize that without your faith and support I may never have had the courage to see this ignomy thru. For this I'm forever in debt.

Control any hate that may affect you and vent your energy to your own well being.

I'll never forget you and once again: thanks

Love John (P.S. Put Pony to pasture)

Freed! It Was in the Stars

Threats, Nightmares, an Image of Prisons

By BRUCE OBEE
Times staff

John McGee's horoscope Tuesday waid "You will work your way out of a legal snarl."

He was acquitted on a charge of attempted murder the same day.

"I feel like buying a blowhorn, going up to Mount Douglas and yelling it all over the city," said McGee during an interview at his home today.

Since Jan. 23 — the day of the shooting which led to a charge of wounding with intent — McGee, 27, of 819 Condor, has been plagued by threats on his life, nightmares and images of a future in prison.

In fact, he was so uncertain of the trial outcome he wrote a letter to his girlfriend, Kris Eley, and left it in his house when he went to court to hear the verdict.

He first appeared in court Feb. 5 and the charge was raised to attempted murder of Charles Scarr. The following day he released on $5,000 bail.

"All of a sudden Condor Street, maybe it's my imagination, but it seemed to turn into a super highway — and it's a dead end street."

"I had two threatening phone calls, one from a man and another from a woman . . . one said there was going to be a contract put on my life.

"Another said I'd better look over my shoulder wherever I go."

The woman next door got into the habit of running past McGee's house and the police kept a close watch from the lane near the backyard.

At parties he introduced himself by another name.

"I'd look at the faces of my friends and even though their voices were reassuring me, their faces and 'I wonder'."

McGee hasn't filled glass to the top for five months. His hands shook so much the liquid spilled out.

"The one thing I was scared of was losing my mind."

During one nightmare he "jumped out of bed and knocked over a table." Another night he dreamed he'd been shot and woke up with saliva dripping from his mouth.

"I thought it was blood.

"But the worst part was waiting for that jury. I was just sort of suspended. I was sitting in that little room playing scrabble, trying to make out the words 'not guilty'."

When the jury came in, "they seemed to be as stoic as tin soldiers. One woman, I can't remember what she looked like, but she looked over at me and smiled."

"I felt like I lost a thousand-pound weight off my head" when the verdict was announced. Actually McGee has lost 14 pounds since the beginning of the trial May 28.

After the verdict he went into the empty hall outside the courtroom and cried.

McGee, a gun collector since the age of 13, says he'll continue to collect them.

"I've been doing it so long it's become a part of me."

While awaiting trial "I wondered whether I'd ever reach the point where I'd hate guns . . . if I'd blame the gun.

"But I've always said that guns don't kill people. People kill people. A gun is not a weapon unless it's used as one."

His collection is insured for $4,000.

What lies ahead for McGee now?

Miracles of Medicine But the Cold Goes On

As a yearly victim of the Summer or Pre-Summer Cold, an affliction that once more has me in its awful spell, I want to mutter a few words today on a subject that's near to the nostrils, if not the heart, of one in every seven citizens.

Pollen, people say, knowingly, but, gosh, I don't think we can blame the mayor for everything. (A touch of humor there and, Lord knows, it ain't easy.) Whatever it is — pollen, a virus or whatever — it takes five or six days out of my life and changes me from a relatively sweet-mannered human to a raging bear.

That may be, in fact, one of the reasons the thing knocks me out so completely. I waste an incredible amount of raw energy hating science and the medical profession so that any vitality that's left to me in this seasonal collapse of my upper respiratory tract is consumed in pure, double-distilled anger. Oh, I'm mean, I tell you.

The news, for example, that my own doctor is toasting himself beside a cool pool on Maui will automatically send my temperature up another full notch. I lie abed, counting the circles on the wallpaper pattern, thinking bitterly of all the world's medicine men as well-heeled playboys frolicking in the sun while humanity (me) is abandoned to its fate.

Any item concerning the latest miracle of modern science such as the Skylab delays my painful recovery at least a full day and sets me grumbling thickly about the madmen of the laboratories tinkering with insane improbables at the expense of millions of us doomed to a lifetime of this recurring agony.

Come back from Maui, come back from outer space, you fools, I croak through my Kleenex, and make your little boy well again.

It may be, as my wife has been heard to remark, that I am the world's most spectacular sufferer from this sort of infection. This, as I see it, only confirms my right as a spokesman, m'Lord, in the case against Medicine and Science.

It is surely the most under-estimated of all the ills that strike mankind. The symptoms — and it is all symptoms — leave the sufferer with a galaxy of weird sensations. The eyes burn like embers in a tub of wet macaroni. The delicate piping of the chest and throat feels as if it has been freshly sand-blasted. The nose becomes distended, hose-like and inflamed. The entire body is so langorous and weighted with insipid aches that the patient feels constantly as if he were being sat upon by Mama Cass.

Yet all of this has a perversely comic effect and explains why a man who has been drained of the will to live may be viewed by his loved ones with ill-concealed amusement.

There is, too, a mental syndrome beyond calculation, a nagging guilt complex compounded by the utter lack of sympathy from people who don't have a cold, themselves, at the time, and frankly suspect you of malingering.

The doctor, if he doesn't happen to be away on his yacht, may tell you that the cure, the only cure, is to lie flat on the withers and wait for Mother Nature to get around to your case. It is up to you to decide when this is effected. It is thus left to the individual to determine if he should creep back to the office and risk the complication of double pneumonia or whether to keep to his couch and risk being dropped six places in the promotion list.

He is thus aware at all times that, even if he survives, he's a sure loser. Since he will spend, on the average, a full two years of a normal lifetime in this wretched condition he may be forgiven for quietly contemplating euthenasia.

The low point in my own prolonged bout with The Thing came when the substitute doctor airily suggested I might steam my meaty proboscis over an inhalator containing benzoin.

Something stirred in my memory and when he'd gone, perhaps to Bermuda, I looked up an essay written nearly 40 years ago by St. Clair McKelway who, as a twice-a-year cold man, had actually entered a hospital to see what might be done for him.

Turned out to be almost nothing. The specialists themselves seemed to take it as their private little joke that they hadn't the faintest idea of what caused a cold or what to do about it. When asked about the benzoin, McKelway was told that its main effect was psychological because "it smells medical."

Here I was, 40 years later, supposedly in an enlightened age of medical onslaught against disease, still being conned by the same old routine. Weak as I was, I managed the energy to be wanly infuriated. This age-old curse, localized in an area not much more than a foot square, persists and is treated as efficiently by the Hopi witch-doctors as it is by the modern "miracle makers."

It isn't that I mind being sick so much. Being sick and mad at the same time takes it out of a man.

GORGE MURALS TO GO

Two murals painted on walls in Gorge Road Hospital's new wing will disappear under vinyl wallpaper, in the near future, hospital administrator Bill Morrison said today.

"I've called the painter in today to take a look at the walls," said Morrison.

The two murals, each covering a 25-foot wall in the wing's second and third floor dining rooms, were painted by Mexican-born artist Luis Merino under a Local Initiatives Project grant and finished May 31.

Merino was warned by Morrison last month that unless they were modified, one or more of the murals would have to be covered up. Merino said he had accommodated the administration as much as he could, and couldn't alter the murals any more.

"I've just had too many negative responses," said Morrison. Some patients refuse to look at the murals when they eat in the dining room.

Doubledecker Buses Now Belong to Hydro

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The shares of London Omnibus Tours Ltd., the Victoria firm which pioneered double - decker sightseeing in North America 11 years ago, have been bought by B.C. Hydro.

Co-owner of the company, former city alderman Harold Olafson, confirmed today that the sale agreement was concluded Monday after weeks of negotiations. The basic assets involved are five buses.

Purchase price is not being disclosed, Olafson said, because Hydro is in negotiation with other companies and does not want to prejudice the outcome of those negotiations.

(A Times article last week reported the provincial government's intention to undertake a major expansion program of transit services on the Island, as part of which the government was ready to acquire any private company wanting to sell.

First indication of the sale surfaced Tuesday at a meeting of city council's public works and traffic committee, when traffic engineer Dave Campbell relayed an application from Royal Blue Lines, the Hydro subsidiary, to use the two parking spaces on the west side of the Causeway formerly allocated to London Omnibus Tours.

Campbell said the request followed the sale of the private company to Hydro.

The announcement was not greeted with enthusiasm. Ald. Alf Hood commented that if Hydro's buying spree continued, the city would soon end up with no licensing revenue from the provincial government at all.

This was a reference to a long-standing complaint at city hall, that Hydro does not pay the $140-per-vehicle licensing fee levied by the city on all sightseeing services. Hydro's solicitors maintain that the licences are covered by the hefty grant in lieu of taxes paid annually to Victoria.

Some aldermen contest that view, but the general feeling of the city has been that it is not worth the legal expenses involved or the risk of souring relations with the province to pursue the matter.

(For its five vehicles, London Omnibus Tours paid $700 in licences. If Royal Blue Lines licensed its fleet of 30 vehicles an additional $4,200 would go to the city in revenue.)

The traffic committee recommended Royal Blue Lines' request for additional Causeway parking space be declined, and that area will likely be turned over to tourist parking.

Last word on the subject from Hood: "They (Hydro) are certainly solving the problems of competition . . ."

These doubledeckers now belong to Hydro

Two Schools Become One

Belmont Senior Secondary and Elizabeth Fisher Junior Secondary will be combined this September to form one secondary school accommodating 1,500 Grade 8 to 12 students.

Only 50 feet separate the two school buildings on Jacklin Road and as of September, they will be wings of a consolidated Belmont Fisher Secondary.

The move will allow greater flexibility in use of staff and physical space, says John Holt, who is principal of Elizabeth Fisher and will take over administration of the combined school.

"We have highly qualified teachers in both schools and we hope to utilize their individual strengths as much as possible."

He hopes the enlarged school will provide better continuity for the students and allow a greater choice in courses.

A Grade 10 student who can handle some Grade 11 course would be able to do so, for example, while a Grade 11 student who fell behind on part of the Grade 10 curriculum could pick up on what he missed.

Some duplication of facilities and office staff will be eliminated in the consolidation but Holt says no cutbacks are foreseen.

Under the principal will be two vice-principals and one administrative assistant, each with equal administrative positions and some teaching duties.

The principal said it will take time to start moving classes between the two buildings and next year students will probably be generally situated in one of the two wings.

"But by September, 1974 we could be seeing all the social studies in one buildng, let's say, and all the science in another," Holt said.

Some arrangements will have to be made for a central administration, he said.

Talks Next Week on Wharf Expansion

By AL FORREST

Standard Oil had agreed to open discussions with Victoria city officials next week on making some of the company's Inner Harbor foreshore area available for expansion of fishermen's wharf.

An agreement would enable the Victoria fishing fleet to continue to anchor here instead of moving to Sooke.

Some 300 fishing vessels are involved.

First word of the agreement to consider a lease to the city came this morning from Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which organized a joint meeting with city and company officials.

Chamber president Terry Farmer said the foreshore lease could be an 11th hour reprieve for the Victoria fishermen who were reported to be unhappy about the prospects of having to anchor at Sooke.

Farmer said the fishing fleet should be retained by Victoria as a convenience to the fishermen and a tourist attraction.

In Vancouver, C. B. Macdonaldy, marketing vice-president for Standard Oil Co. of B.C. Ltd., confirmed that talks would open next week with Mayor Peter Pollen on the possibility of leasing the company's foreshore rights for expansion of the fishermen's wharf.

However, he stressed that discussions so far were in a preliminary stage.

He said the company is willing to sign a lease with the city if an agreement on terms could be reached.

Farmer said the Standard Oil property was the only possible area available for a Victoria fishermen's wharf large enough to handle the fleet.

The chamber had sought and failed to locate sites in Esquimalt harbor and Portage Inlet.

The chamber was excited about the prospect for wharf expansion on the Standard Oil holdings and work could begin as soon as a lease is signed.

Farmer said a key element in the expansion of the wharf was the availability of land in Colwood for future relocation of the Standard Oil tank farm over the next five to ten years.

In Vancouver, Macdonald said reports he had received on the proposed new siting of the tank farm were all unofficial. He said he would contact officials of the capital region district to get official word on what is proposed for the company.

He said the company wished to co-operate on harbor development and was looking forward to next week's discussions with Mayor Pollen.

KEY JOB FOR LAIRD

Nixon Shuffles Staff

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon announced three moves today in a major rebuilding of his Watergate-shaken White House staff.

Gen. Alexander Haig is to retire from army duty and continue as chief of the White House staff, a post he has held on an interim basis.

Former defence secretary Melvin Laird is appointed counsellor to the president for domestic affairs and, in that cabinet-rank post, will in effect succeed John Ehrlichman who resigned April 30 along with the former staff chief H. R. Haldeman.

Ronald Ziegler, while remaining as press secretary, will be given the added title of assistant to the president and given a role in White House policy making.

Today's announcement said Haig will be responsible for "co-ordination and supervision of the day-to-day operations and responsibilities of the White House staff."

Laird, a former U.S. House of Representatives member from Wisconsin, "will be responsible for the over-all formulation and co-ordination of domestic policy," said the White House.

Ziegler, with the resignation of Herbert Klein as director of communications, will assume responsibility for the communications office as well as the press office. It said:

"As assistant to the president, he will be involved in policy meetings both with the president and other senior staff members, and also will retain his briefing responsibilities and daily contact with members of the press."

In other developments:

● Ehrlichman has claimed that former U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell gave his specific approval to plans to bug the Democrats' Watergate headquarters.

In a deposition released Tuesday, Ehrlichman quoted deputy presidential campaign manager Jeb Stuart Magruder as saying that Mitchell gave oral approval of the bugging operation.

● Sam Dash, Senate Watergate committee counsel said today he will seek through negotiations, rather than subpoena, to obtain logs of conversations between Nixon and John Dean, ousted

$800 CITY HOLDUP

A middle-aged man staged a robbery this morning at the Yates-Government branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

He was believed to have escaped with about $800 in large bills after passing one of the tellers a note which said he was armed.

Other employees in the bank were apparently unaware of what was happening.

The robbery occurred at 11:30 a.m. The robber left the bank and ran east on Yates.

It is the second robbery in less than two years at the same bank.

The bank staff watched in horror as Berkhardt Bateman, 19, gunned down two city policemen at point blank range in September, 1971. Both policemen recovered.

Dollar Crisis Talks

PARIS—Top United States and European monetary officials met here today amid growing speculation of imminent new measures by the Nixon administration to restore confidence in the United States dollar.

Despite the U.S. devaluation last February and the floating of major currencies the following month, the dollar has declined steeply in recent days, and the price of gold has risen to all-time records.

In London today, however, the price of gold dropped and the dollar improved at the start of trading on Europe's seesaw money markets, where gold over the past several weeks has skyrocketed and the dollar has crumbled.

Dealers attributed today's developments to profit taking by speculators who drove the price of dollars to new lows in hectic trading Tuesday.

Most money experts before today's trading began agreed that the scramble to buy gold and sell dollars showed no sign of ending.

French President Georges Pompidou Tuesday night told a group of international bankers that "we are witnessing the third devaluation of the (U.S.) dollar."

The fact that Shultz has made a quick change in plans —he will make his appearance here today and then head back immediately to the United States—has added to the note of uneasiness.

Tuesday night, Nixon assembled his closest economic aides in Washington for policy discussions on the U.S. economy.

Republican Senate Leader Hugh Scott said after the meeting the president was actively considering domestic economic measures to counter inflation.

Gold in London dropped back $6.50 an ounce to $120.50 at the close of trading.

Firemen Give Notice

Residents of North Saanich will be without fire protection as of 10 p.m. Thursday unless internal problems in the volunteer fire department are resolved, fire chief Wally Snow said today.

The ultimatum—solve the problems or else—was issued to municipal council after a fire department meeting Tuesday night. The men have given council 48 hours to set things straight.

Snow said 11 members of the 21-member department have already resigned over the dispute with council, but said fire protection would continue until the 48 hours had run out.

"The public can rest assured that they will get fire protection until Thursday night, but unless something happens at that time, that will be the end of it."

Snow said a meeting with council will be held before the 48-hour deadline, but just exactly when, he wasn't sure.

The dispute, he said, revolves mainly around a matter of administration.

Deputy fire chief Ron Evans was more specific about the problems in the department:

"The main thing in this fight is communication and co-operation between our fire department and the council. There are many things underneath that, but communications and co-operation are the basic issues—many of these things we're not prepared to bring to the public, at least not at this time."

Both Snow and Evans said a statement would be issued to residents of North Saanich telling them the outcome of the meeting.

As of this morning, North Saanich aldermen knew nothing of the meeting, or of the dispute.

Crash Strait No-Man Sea

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The most dangerous area of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, where the second collision between two freighters within a month occurred Tuesday is a No-Man's Land.

Neither the Canadian nor the U.S. coast guard system of traffic monitoring extends that far.

Officials agreed, however, because of the prevalence of fog banks in the area, it was probably the place where marine traffic is most vulnerable to incidents such as Tuesday's.

Two large freighters — the 544-foot container vessel Oriental Mariner and the 564-foot log carrier Way Way — rammed into each other Tuesday about 12:30 p.m. in American waters just north of Neah Bay on the Washington side of the Strait.

The spot was barely five-miles away from where the Indian vessel Vishva Shakti and the Australian freighter Allunga collided May 16.

A U.S. coast guard spokesman in Seattle admitted today that monitoring on their side of the coast only covered the area from Puget Sound up to Port Angeles.

A spokesman of the ministry of transport's Vancouver office confirmed that the Canadian system, too, had a "blind spot" in the most crucial stretch of the Strait.

Both countries' systems are based on voluntary reporting of ships as the first phase of programs that eventually will have all traffic being tracked by radar from shore bases. Ships will also be required to report their positions to various check points once they reach Cape Flattery and head into the mouth of the Strait.

The Oriental Mariner was limping at a slow four knots toward Seattle today for repairs, her bow badly battered, both anchors torn away and her No. 1 hold damaged.

The coast guard official said she is due to arrive in Seattle about 9:30 tonight.

Because of her extensive damage to the bow two tugs tried to tow her by the stern Tuesday. A third larger tug was despatched in the night hours.

The effort of all three tugs

Machinists Hit 5 Cities

Times News Services

In the third of a series of spot strikes, Air Canada machinists walked off the job in Halifax, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon and Thunder Bay, Ont., today.

A union spokesman said a walkout would take place at another — as-yet undisclosed — location Thursday.

Speculation is that Thursday's walkout could be centered on Toronto, the only major centre in Canada not hit so far in the dispute between the union and the country's national airline.

The only centre which reported flights cancelled today was Winnipeg.

An Air Canada spokesman acknowledged a union charge that the airline had kept 150 supervisory personnel at the Skyline Hotel in Toronto in anticipation of a strike in that city, but said the number of people "on stand-by" was closer to 50.

Air Canada, CN Record Years

OTTAWA — Canada's two Crown Corporation transportation firms showed strong financial gains in 1972, according to annual reports tabled Tuesday in the Commons.

Air Canada earned a record net income of $8.6 million and Canadian National also had a record year with an operating profit of $48.3 million.

However, payments on a long-term CN debt produced a deficit of $17.8 million.

TWO MAYORS WALK OUT

Times News Services

CHARLOTTETOWN — The mayors of Canada's second and third largest cities walked out of the annual meeting of the Federation of Mayors and Municipalities conference Tuesday.

Toronto's David Crombie and Vancouver's Art Phillips both said the conference was irrelevant to the needs of municipalities.

Crombie, who swept into office last December at the head of a reform slate, rapped the meeting as purley a "social occasion."

Phillips said he felt he was "just wasting my time" at the meeting.

"There are things to do" at home, he added.

At the core of the dispute between the large cities and the smaller municipalities is a debate over the way to conduct talks with senior governments.

The smaller communities — which hold the balance of power at the meeting — favor a concerted approach to provincial and federal officials. The larger cities want each community to bargain on its own with senior governments.

U.S. Fuel Clamps Sought

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The Senate has overwhelmingly voted to direct President Nixon to clamp strict controls on the oil industry's allocation of fuel to help ease the gasoline shortage.

By a vote of 85 to 10 Tuesday, the senate approved a bill that would require the president to establish mandatory government fuel allocation regulations and impose them whenever he determines that any energy source is in short supply.

Sen. Henry Jackson, chairman of the interior committee, said the lopsided vote showed there was a "new mood of urgency" in Congress over the energy crisis.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association Tuesday said a check of more than 1,500 gas stations around the U.S. showed two-thirds of them had adequate supplies.

The survey showed the southeast and northwest sections appeared to have the tightest gasoline supplies at present.

Blazing Gun Escape

COMPIEGNE, France (AP) — Jacques Mesrine, wanted in Canada for several murders and robberies, made a spectacular gun-wielding escape today from a courthouse in this town north of Paris. In the process he used a judge as a shield and shot a guard.

It was the second time he slipped through the hands of the law. He escaped from a maximum security jail in Quebec last year after cutting through two wire fences.

Mesrine was brought here to appear in a cheque-fraud case. Handcuffed, he asked to go to the lavatory.

Later in court when the judge walked in Mesrine pulled out a gun and threatened to kill him unless he were set free. The guards immediately unlocked the handcuffs.

Shielded by the judge, Mesrine walked slowly past the dumbfounded spectators, slipped into a getaway car and drove away.

He was intercepted by a police van nearby but shot a guard through the shoulder and disappeared.

Record Vancouver Drug Bust

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record 173 suspected drug traffickers were charged here Tuesday following a massive undercover operation by two Vancouver police constables and a seven-man surveillance team in the last five months.

The roundup began as police and RCMP officers arrested at least 53 persons charged mainly with possession and trafficking of heroin. Of the 173 warrants issued, 122 deal with heroin distribution.

The two undercover officers were recent graduates of the police academy when the investigation began Feb. 5. During their work they made 80 buys on Vancouver streets, 32 involving heroin.

The surveillance team then followed suspects for names and addresses, resulting in 90 persons being charged with 205 offences.

Staff Sgt. Sid Devries said most of the persons charged are small-time street dealers. However, two of those sought are considered very big, dealing in ounces of heroin. Asked if the roundup would put a dent in Vancouver's heroin system, he replied, "It will if they keep them in jail."

Those arrested Tuesday were held without bail and were scheduled to appear in court today.

A spokesman for the RCMP drug squad in the Victoria area said today the Vancouver undercover operation did not lead to any arrests there.

"We weren't involved in any way." The charges were "totally independent of our operation," RCMP superintendent Jim Nelson said.

The previous drug roundup record was in October, 1972, when 123 Vancouver-area people were charged in a nationwide investigation by RCMP. The Vancouver total was more than half that of the rest of Canada.
